(b) The Office of Management and Budget, in reviewing the materials research, development, and technology authorization requests of the various Federal departments and agencies for any fiscal year, shall consider all of such requests as an integrated, coherent, multiagency request which shall be reviewed by the Council and the Office of Management and Budget for its adherence to the national Federal materials program plan in effect for such fiscal year under subsection (a).

INNOVATION IN BASIC AND ADVANCED MATERIALS INDUSTRIES

SEC. 206. (a)(1) In order to promote the use of more cost-effective, advanced technology and other means of providing for innovation and increased productivity within the basic and advanced materials industries, the Council shall evaluate and make recommendations regarding the establishment of Centers for Industrial Technology as provided in Public Law 96-480 (15 U.S.C. 3705).

DEFINITION

Sec. 212. As used in this title, the term "materials" has the meaning given it by section 2(b) of the National Materials and Minerals Policy, Research and Development Act of 1980.

Amend the title so as to read: "An Act to provide for a comprehensive national policy dealing with national research needs and objectives in the Arctic, for a National Critical Materials Council, for development of a continuing and comprehensive national materials policy, for programs necessary to carry out that policy, including Federal programs of advanced materials research and technology, and for innovation in basic materials industries, and for other purposes.".

AMENDMENT NO. 3329

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk on behalf of the distinguished junior Senator from Alaska, and I ask that it be stated by the clerk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Baker], for Mr. Murkowski, proposes an amendment numbered 3329.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 4, in section 102(b)(1), strike the words "physical and biological sciences," and insert in lieu thereof "physical, biological and health sciences,".

On page 11, in section 107(b)(2), insert a new subparagraph (H) as follows:

"(H) the Department of Health and Human Services;" Reletter the existing subsequent subparagraphs accordingly as subparagraphs (I), (J), and (K).

AMENDMENT NO. 3330 TO AMENDMENT NO. 3329

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I send a second amendment to the desk on behalf of the Senator from Alaska [Mr. Murkowski] and ask that it be stated by the clerk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Baker] for Mr. Murkowski, proposes an amendment numbered 3330.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 7, amend section 103(d)(1) to read as follows:

"(d)(1) Members of the Commission may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by section 5703 of title 5, United States Code. A member of the Commission not presently employed for compensation shall be compensated at a rate equal to the daily equivalent of the rate for GS-16 of the General Schedule under section 5332 of title 5, United States Code, for each day the member is engaged in the actual performance of his duties as a member of the Commission, not to exceed 90 days of service each year. Except for the purposes of Chapter 81 of title 5 (relating to compensation for work injuries) and Chapter 171 of title 28 (relating to tort claims), a member of the Commission shall not be considered an employee of the United States for any purpose."

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, the purpose of the amendments to title I are as follows: The effect of the first amendment is to stress health research along with Arctic research related to natural resources, physical sciences, biological sciences, and social sciences already stressed in this bill. I believe the partial omission of Arctic health research by the House was a simple oversight which this amendment corrects.

The second amendment, Mr. President, addresses the compensation of the members of the Arctic Research Commission established by this act. The bill as currently written would reimburse the Commissioners for travel and expenses incurred in the performance of their duties as a Commissioner. I believe this is adequate for the members of the Arctic Research Commission who are otherwise employed by the Federal Government, a university, private industry, or the State of Alaska. I believe, however, that we should go further and provide some limited compensation to members who may be retired or not otherwise employed. In those cases, I believe there should be some modest financial incentive to participate as an Arctic Research Commissioner. The effect of this amendment is to compensate such an individual at a rate equal to the daily equivalent for civil service grade GS-16 for each day that individual is engaged in the actual performance of his or her duties as an Arctic Research Commissioner, not to exceed 90 days per year.

I urge the adoption of the amendments.

The amendment (No. 3329) was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 3331

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move that the Senate concur in the House amendments as amended by the Senate amendments, with a further Senate amendment which I now send to the desk on behalf of the Senator from Idaho [Mr. McClure] and ask that it be stated by the clerk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Baker], for Mr. McClure, proposes an amendment numbered 3331.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 19, in section 202(b)(1)(A), strike the words "Federal Government, and provide for" and insert in lieu thereof "Federal Government, and make recommendations for".

On page 21, in section 204(a)(1), strike the words "in carrying out activities" and insert in lieu thereof "making recommendations".

On page 25, in section 205(a)(1)(A), strike the words "designating the key responsibilities for carrying out such research and providing for coordination with the Office" and insert in lieu thereof "recommend the designation of the key responsibilities for carrying out such research, and to provide for coordination of this plan with the Office".

On page 25, in section 205(a)(2), strike the words "shall, in cooperation with" and insert in lieu thereof "shall make recommendations, in cooperation with".

On page 25 in section 205(a)(2), strike the words "deemed appropriate ensure" and insert in lieu thereof "deemed appropriate, to ensure".

On page 26, in section 205(b), strike the words "shall consider all of such requests as" and insert in lieu thereof "and the recommendations of the Council, shall consider all of such requests and recommendations as".

On page 26, in section 205(b), strike the words "reviewed by the Council and" and insert in lieu thereof "reviewed by".

On page 27, in section 207(b), strike the word "The" at the beginning thereof and insert "Subject to existing law and regulations governing conflicts of interest, the".

On page 30, in section 210(2), strike the word "property" and insert in lieu thereof the words "materials and supplies".

On page 30, in section 210(4), after the word "publish" insert the words ", consistent with Title 44 of the United States Code,".

On page 30, in section 210, strike the "and" at the end of subsection (3) and add the following new subsection (4):

"(4) to utilize such services or personnel as may be provided to the Council on a reimbursable basis by any agency of the United States; and".

Renumber existing subsection (4) as subsection (5).

On page 31, at the end of section 211 strike the word "thereafter." and insert in lieu thereof "thereafter: Provided, That the authority provided for in this title shall expire on September 30, 1990, unless otherwise authorised by Congress."

Mr. McCLURE. Mr. President, I am offering a series of amendments to title II of S. 373 as passed by the House which relate to the authorities and responsibilities of the National Critical Materials Council. My amendments, taken together accomplish several objectives.

First, they ensure that the Council does not have any line authority to direct other agencies of the Federal Government in the execution of their authorities and programs as they relate to critical material. The Council's function is thereby limited to the much needed role of coordinator and adviser on critical materials programs and policies. While the Council is given ample authority to review, appraise, monitor, evaluate, assess, study, assist, coordinate, recommend, and advice on critical materials and materials-related policies, programs, and activities, the basic statutory responsibilities and authorities of the several Federal agencies, the role of the Office of Management and Budget, the Cabinet Council, and Executive Office of the President remain unchanged.

Second, my amendments provide for a sunset provision on the Council after 6 years.

Third, my amendments include several technical changes which ensure applicability of conflict of interest rules, which clarify the Council's authorities to acquire materials and supplies, to publish information, and to utilize the services or personnel of other Federal agencies on a reimbursable basis.

Mr. President, I am pleased to say that these amendments have been worked out with the other body and are believed to be acceptable. I know of no objections on this side. I also thank Senators STEVENS, ROTH, JOHNSTON, EAGLETON, and MURKOWSKI for their assistance and cooperation in this matter. I believe we now have an improved bill which contains important new initiatives in the areas of Arctic research and policy and critical materials policy, which I strongly support.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3331) was agreed to.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I am pleased that through passage of the Arctic Research and Policy Act we are finally taking an important step toward recognizing the importance of developing a comprehensive Arctic research policy. For years, other Arctic rim countries have sought a better understanding of the Arctic through extensive and coordinated research programs. For instance, the Soviet Union has an active Arctic research program involving 20,000 scientists. Other countries have acknowledged the need to better understand their Arctic regions in order to enhance energy development in their northern areas. Among nations with Arctic regions, we are the last to develop a comprehensive Arctic research effort.

Passage of this bill by the Congress marks the start of a commitment to the needs of our Arctic regions that will help us understand a great deal not only about the Arctic, but about how development there affects the rest of the world's climatic patterns. In the long run, a well thought out Arctic science policy will ensure the best management and use of the Arctic's vast resources—natural, human, and strategic. Gathering data on ice characteristics and flow patterns will help improve offshore mineral exploration and production designs to maximize safety and minimize environmental impacts. We have an obligation to the residents of our northern regions to insure that the development of our natural resources there does not unduly infringe upon subsistence resources or traditional Native cultures.

Again, I commend the Senate for taking up this bill. Senator MURKOWSKI deserves a great deal of credit for pursuing this issue through two Congresses. Without his dedication the development of a national Arctic science policy would probably still be an unrealized goal. The late Senator Henry Jackson, as well, was instrumental in the formulation of this legislation. He long recognized the importance of a comprehensive Arctic science policy, and worked with Senator MURKOWSKI, Senator GORTON, and me for Senate passage of similar legislation last summer. Finally, Congressman DON YOUNG deserves recognition for his efforts in steering the bill through the House of Representatives.

PRINTING OF H.R. 5174

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I believe the request I am about to put has been cleared. I ask unanimous consent that H.R. 5174, as passed by the Senate, be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD since the subject matter of the bill is of a time-sensitive nature due to the fact that the bill has 1 week only to be in conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The text of the bill follows:

Resolved, That the bill from the House of Representatives (H.R. 5174) entitled "An Act to provide for the appointment of United States bankruptcy judges under article III of the Constitution, to amend title 11 of the United States Code for the purpose of making certain changes in the personal bankruptcy law, of making certain changes regarding grain storage facilities, and of clarifying the circumstance under which collective-bargaining agreements may be rejected in cases under chapter 11, and for other purposes", do pass with the following amendments: Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That this Act may be cited as the "Bankruptcy Court and Federal Judgeship Act of 1984".

Such decision to abstain or to not abstain is not reviewable by appeal or otherwise.

"(2) In a proceeding involving the debtor which is based upon a State law claim or cause of action neither arising under title 11 nor arising in a case under title 11, which could not otherwise have been brought in Federal court absent jurisdiction under this section, the court shall, upon proper motion, abstain from adjudicating such claim in the bankruptcy proceeding where an action to adjudicate such claim has been or will be timely instituted and prosecuted in a State forum of appropriate jurisdiction: Provided, That this paragraph shall be construed to limit the applicability of the stay provided for by section 362 of title 11, United States Code, only to the extent necessary to permit adjudication but not the execution of such claim by the State forum. Such abstention is not reviewable by appeal or otherwise.

"(3) A motion to abstain pursuant to this subsection shall be filed with the initial pleading.

"(3) Whenever a majority of the judges of any court of appeals cannot agree upon the appointment of a bankruptcy judge, the chief judge of such court shall make such appointment.

"(4) The judges of the district courts for the territories shall serve as the bankruptcy judges for such courts. The United States court of appeals for the circuit within which such a territorial district court is located may appoint bankruptcy judges under this chapter for such district if authorized to do so by the Congress of the United States under this section.

"(b)(1) The Judicial Conference of the United States shall, from time to time, and after considering the recommendations submitted by the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts after such Director has consulted with the judicial council of the circuit involved, determine the official duty stations of bankruptcy judges and places of holding court.

"(2) The Judicial Conference shall, from time to time, submit recommendations to the Congress regarding the number of bankruptcy judges needed and the districts in which such judges are needed.

"(c) Each bankruptcy judge may hold court at such places within the judicial district, in addition to the official duty station of such judge, as the business of the court may require.

"(d) With the approval of the Conference and of each of the judicial councils involved, a bankruptcy judge may be designated to serve in any district adjacent to or near the district for which such bankruptcy judge was appointed.

"(e) A bankruptcy judge may be removed during the term for which such bankruptcy judge is appointed, only for incompetence, misconduct, neglect of duty, or physical or mental disability and only by the judicial council of the circuit in which the judge's official duty station is located. Removal may not occur unless a majority of all of the judges of such council concur in the order of removal. Before any order of removal may be entered, a full specification of charges shall be furnished to such bankruptcy judge who shall be accorded an opportunity to be heard on such charges.

"§ 153. Salaries; character of service

"(a) Each bankruptcy judge shall serve on a full-time basis and shall receive as full compensation for his services a salary at an annual rate of $66,100. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, such salaries shall remain at such rate unless a higher rate is authorized by a law specifically increasing the rate of pay for bankruptcy judges.

"(b) A bankruptcy judge may not engage in the practice of law and may not engage in any other practice, business, occupation, or employment inconsistent with the expeditious, proper, and impartial performance of such bankruptcy judge's duties as a judicial officer. The Conference may promulgate appropriate rules and regulations to implement this subsection.

"(c) Each individual appointed under this chapter shall take the oath or affirmation prescribed by section 453 of this title before performing the duties of the office of bankruptcy judge.

"§ 154. Division of business; chief judge

"(a) Each bankruptcy court for a district having more than one bankruptcy judge shall by majority vote promulgate rules for the division of business among the bankruptcy judges to the extent that the division of business is not otherwise provided for by the rules of the district court.

"(b) In each district court having more than one bankruptcy judge the district court shall designate one judge to serve as chief judge of such bankruptcy court. Whenever a majority of the judges of such district court cannot agree upon the designation as chief judge, the chief judge of such district court shall make such designation. The chief judge of the bankruptcy court shall ensure that the rules of the bankruptcy court and of the district court are observed and that the business of the bankruptcy court is handled effectively and expeditiously.

"§ 155. Temporary transfer of bankruptcy judges

"(a) A bankruptcy judge may be transferred to serve temporarily as a bankruptcy judge in any judicial district other than the judicial district for which such bankruptcy judge was appointed upon the approval of the judicial council of each of the circuits involved.

"(b) A bankruptcy judge who has retired may, upon consent, be recalled to serve as a bankruptcy judge in any judicial district by the judicial council of the circuit within which such district is located. Upon recall, a bankruptcy judge may receive a salary for such service in accordance with regulations promulgated by the Judicial Conference of the United States, subject to the restrictions on the payment of an annuity in subchapter III of chapter 83 of title 5.

"§ 156. Staff; expenses

"(a) Each bankruptcy judge may appoint a secretary, a law clerk, and such additional assistants as the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts determines to be necessary.

"(b) Upon certification to the judicial council of the circuit involved and to the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts that the number of cases and proceedings pending within the jurisdiction under section 1334 of this title within a judicial district so warrants, the bankruptcy judges for such district may appoint an individual to serve as clerk of such bankruptcy court. The clerk may appoint, with the approval of such bankruptcy judges, and in such number as may be approved by the Director, necessary deputies, and may remove such deputies with the approval of such bankruptcy judges.

"(c) Any court may utilize facilities or services, either on or off the court's premises, which pertain to the provision of notices, dockets, calendars, and other administrative information to parties in cases filed under the provisions of title 11, United States Code, where the costs of such facilities or services are paid for out of the assets of the estate and are not charged to the United States. The utilization of such facilities or services shall be subject to such conditions and limitations as the pertinent circuit council may prescribe.

"§ 157. Procedures

"(a) Each district court may provide that any or all cases under title 11 and any or all proceedings arising under title 11 or arising in or related to a case under title 11 shall be referred to the bankruptcy judges for the district.

"(b)(1) Bankruptcy judges may hear and determine all cases under title 11 and all core proceedings arising under title 11, or arising in a case under title 11, referred under subsection (a) of this section, and may enter appropriate orders and judgments, subject to review under section 158 of this title.

"(2) Core proceedings include, but are not limited to—

"(A) matters concerning the administration of the estate;

"(E) orders to turn over property of the estate;

"(F) proceedings to determine, avoid, or recover preferences;

"(L) confirmations of plans;

"(M) orders approving the use or lease of property, including the use of cash collateral; and

"(N) orders approving the sale of property other than property resulting from claims brought by the estate against persons who have not filed claims against the estate.

"(3) The bankruptcy judge shall determine, on the judge's own motion or on timely motion of a party, whether a proceeding is a core proceeding under this subsection or is a proceeding that is otherwise related to a case under title 11. A determination that a proceeding is not a core proceeding shall not be made solely on the basis that its resolution may be affected by State law.

"(c)(1) A bankruptcy judge may hear a proceeding that is not a core proceeding but that is otherwise related to a case under title 11. In such proceeding, the bankruptcy judge shall submit proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law to the district court, and any final order or judgment shall be entered by the district judge after considering the bankruptcy judge's proposed findings and conclusions and after reviewing de novo those matters to which any party has timely and specifically objected.

"(2) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (1) of this subsection, the district court, with the consent of all the parties to the proceeding, may refer a proceeding related to a case under title 11 to a bankruptcy judge to hear and determine and to enter appropriate orders and judgments, subject to review under section 158 of this title.

"(d) The district court may withdraw, in whole or in part, any case or proceeding referred under this section, on its own motion or on timely motion of any party, for cause shown. The district court shall, on timely motion of a party, so withdraw a proceeding if the court determines that resolution of the proceeding requires consideration of both title 11 and other laws of the United States regulating organizations or activities affecting interstate commerce.

"§ 158. Appeals

"(a) The district courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction to hear appeals from final judgments, orders, and decrees, and, with leave of the court, from interlocutory orders and decrees, of bankruptcy judges entered in cases and proceedings referred to the bankruptcy judges under section 157 of this title. An appeal under this subsection shall be taken only to the district court for the judicial district in which the bankruptcy judge is serving.

"(b)(1) The judicial council of a circuit may establish a bankruptcy appellate panel, comprised of bankruptcy judges from districts within the circuit, to hear and determine, upon the consent of all the parties, appeals under subsection (a) of this section.

"(2) No appeal may be referred to a panel under this subsection unless the district judges for the district, by majority vote, authorize such referral of appeals originating within the district.

"(3) A panel established under this section shall consist of three bankruptcy judges, provided a bankruptcy judge may not hear an appeal originating within a district for which the judge is appointed or designated under section 152 of this title.

"(c) An appeal under subsections (a) and (b) of this section shall be taken in the same manner as appeals in civil proceedings generally are taken to the courts of appeals from the district courts and in the time provided by Rule 8002 of the Bankruptcy Rules.

"(d) The courts of appeals shall have jurisdiction of appeals from all final decisions, judgments, orders, and decrees entered under subsections (a) and (b) of this section.".

"(b)(1) If there has been a default in an executory contract or unexpired lease of the debtor, the trustee may not assume such contract or lease unless, at the time of assumption of such contract or lease, the trustee—

"(A) cures, or provides adequate assurance that the trustee will promptly cure, such default;

"(B) compensates, or provides adequate assurance that the trustee will promptly compensate, a party other than the debtor to such contract or lease, for any actual pecuniary loss to such party resulting from such default; and

"(C) provides adequate assurance of future performance under such contract or lease.

"(2) Paragraph (1) of this subsection does not apply to a default that is a breach of a provision relating to—

"(A) the insolvency or financial condition of the debtor at any time before the closing of the case;

"(B) the commencement of a case under this title; or

"(C) the appointment of or taking possession by a trustee in a case under this title or a custodian before such commencement.

"(A) of the source of rent and other consideration due under such lease, and in the case of an assignment, that the financial condition and operating performance of the proposed assignee and its guarantors, if any, shall be similar to the financial condition and operating performance of the debtor and its guarantors, if any, as of the time the debtor became the lessee under the lease;

"(B) that any percentage rent due under such lease will not decline substantially;

"(C) that assumption or assignment of such lease is subject to all the provisions thereof, including (but not limited to) provisions such as a radius, location, use, or exclusivity provision, and will not breach any such provision contained in any other lease, financing agreement, or master agreement relating to such shopping center; and

"(D) that assumption or assignment of such lease will not disrupt any tenant mix or balance in such shopping center.

"(4) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, if there has been a default in an unexpired lease of the debtor, other than a default of a kind specified in paragraph (2) of this subsection, the trustee may not require a lessor to provide services or supplies incidental to such lease before assumption of such lease unless the lessor is compensated under the terms of such lease for any services and supplies provided under such lease before assumption of such lease.

"(c) The trustee may not assume or assign any executory contract or unexpired lease of the debtor, whether or not such contract or lease prohibits or restricts assignment of rights or delegation of duties, if—

"(1)(A) applicable law excuses a party, other than the debtor, to such contract or lease from accepting performance from or rendering performance to an entity other than the debtor or the debtor in possession or an assignee of such contract or lease, whether or not such contract or lease prohibits or restricts assignment of rights or delegation of duties; and

The court may extend, for cause, the time for performance of any such obligation that arises within 60 days after the date of the order for relief, but the time for performance shall not be extended beyond such 60-day period. This subsection shall not be deemed to affect the trustee's obligations under the provisions of subsection (b) or (f) of this section. Acceptance of any such performance does not constitute waiver or relinquishment of the lessor's rights under such lease or under this title.

"(4) Notwithstanding paragraphs (1) and (2), in a case under any chapter of this title, if the trustee does not assume or reject an unexpired lease of nonresidential real property under which the debtor is the lessee within 60 days after the date of the order for relief, or within such additional time as the court, for cause, within such 60-day period, fixes, then such lease is deemed rejected, and the trustee shall immediately surrender such nonresidential real property to the lessor.".

REPRESENTATION BY SENATE LEGAL COUNSEL

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I now send to the desk a resolution for myself and the distinguished minority leader in respect to representation by the Senate Legal Counsel, and I ask the Senate turn to its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be stated.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 413) to direct the Senate Legal Counsel to represent Patrick J. Griffin in Lyndon H. LaRouche, Jr., and The LaRouche Campaign versus Donald T. Regan, Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, in 1968, the Congress enacted Public Law 90-331 to authorize the Secret Service to provide protection to major Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates. This protection is to be extended, in the words of the statute, "to persons who are determined from time to time by the Secretary of the Treasury, after consultation with the advisory committee, as being major presidential or vice presidential candidates who should receive such protection. * * *"

The law provides that the advisory committee shall consist of the Speaker and the minority leader of the House, the majority and minority leaders of the Senate, and an additional member chosen by them. Former Attorney General and Secretary of State William P. Rogers is presently the fifth member. The members of the advisory committee approach their statutory assignment with considerable care and responsibility. It should be clear, nonetheless, from the language of the statute, that the law vests in the Secretary of the Treasury, not in the advisory committee, the legal responsibility for determining who should receive Secret Service protection. The role of the advisory committee is to offer advice to the Secretary, who must then exercise his discretion under the statute.

Lyndon H. LaRouche, Jr., who has campaigned this year for the Democratic Presidential nomination, has brought an action against the Secretary of the Treasury to challenge the Secretary's determination that Mr. LaRouche is not a major Presidential candidate who should receive protection. In pursuing his lawsuit, Mr. LaRouche's counsel has served a deposition subpoena on Patrick J. Griffin, the secretary for the minority, who is Senator Byrd's representative on the advisory committee. Similar deposition subpoenas have been served on the representatives for Speaker O'Neill and House Minority Leader Michel.

The following resolution authorizes the Senate Legal Counsel to represent Mr. Griffin in these discovery proceedings.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution (S. Res. 413) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. Res. 413

Whereas, in the case of Lyndon H. La Rouche, Jr. and The LaRouche Campaign v. Donald T. Regan, Secretary of the Treasury, Case No. 84-0190-A, pending in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia, the plaintiffs are challenging the determination of the Secretary of the Treasury, pursuant to Public Law 90-331, as amended, not to provide Secret Service protection to Lyndon H. LaRouche, Jr.;

Whereas, the plaintiffs in that action have caused the United States District Court for the District of Columbia to issue a deposition subpoena, No. F.S. 84-0355, to Patrick J. Griffin, the Secretary for the Minority, for testimony and documents;

Whereas, pursuant to section 703(a) and 704(a)(2) of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, 2 U.S.C. 288b(a) and 288c(a)(2) (1982), the Senate may direct its counsel to defend an officer of the Senate with respect to any subpoena directed to him in his official capacity: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate Legal Counsel is directed to represent Patrick J. Griffin in Lyndon H. LaRouche, Jr., and The LaRouche Campaign v. Donald T. Regan, Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was agreed to.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Edward E. Wolfe, of Virginia, to be Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Oceans and Fisheries Affairs.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I am pleased today to support the confirmation of Mr. Edward Wolfe for the rank of U.S. Ambassador. Mr. Wolfe is the primary person in the State Department responsible for international fishery affairs. As such, Mr. Wolfe will be intimately involved on a day-to-day basis in dealing with controversial fishery problems of great significance to U.S. fishery interests. For example, he has been instrumental in working with Japanese and Republic of Korea officials to increase trade in fishery products and to reduce barriers to U.S. fish exports. Mr. Wolfe personally led a U.S. mission to Japan and Korea to raise important U.S. concerns on this matter in late May of this year.

Mr. Wolfe is the person in the State Department also responsible for renegotiating Governing International Fishery Agreements (GIFA's). He has renegotiated GIFA agreements with Romania, Denmark, and the Faroe Islands, and is currently leading U.S. efforts in a very sensitive GIFA renegotiation with the European Economic Community. Mr. Wolfe was the primary Federal official responsible for the proposed extension of GIFA agreements with the Soviet Union and Poland.

Mr. Wolfe has been instrumental in urging Latin American nations to ratify the Eastern Pacific Ocean Tuna Fishing Agreement, signed by the United States and four other nations in 1983. Once the treaty enters into force, it will establish a regional licensing system for tuna fishing in the eastern Pacific, providing U.S. vessels with access to this important fishing ground. Mr. Wolfe has led several other delegations to Central America in recent months to urge the remaining three nations—Costa Rica, Honduras, and Guatemala—to ratify the agreement and allow it to take effect.

Another important aspect of Mr. Wolfe's responsibilities will center on his role in overseeing the allocation of about 1.6 million metric tons of surplus U.S. fishery resources to foreign countries. Such allocations require effective and continual coordination with various affected U.S. fishery interests. Mr. Wolfe has, in all of his endeavors on behalf of the American fishing industry, been highly supportive of and sensitive to the goals of Congress and the industry in using U.S. surplus fishery resources in ways which will maximize benefits to our domestic fishing industry.

I take this opportunity to congratulate Mr. Wolfe for a job well done and do wish him success in his future work as a U.S. Ambassador.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The nomination is considered and confirmed.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the nomination was confirmed.

Mr. BYRD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

Mr. BYRD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Charles G. Stalon, of Illinois, to be a member of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

Mr. McCLURE. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the nomination of Charles G. Stalon to be a member of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. On June 20 the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources favorably reported Dr. Stalon's nomination by a vote of 19 to 0. A hearing was held to consider the nomination on June 7.

Dr. Stalon is well qualified to effectively carry out the responsibilities of a FERC Commissioner. He has served as a commissioner on the Illinois Commerce Commission since 1977. Prior to that appointment, he was an associate professor of economics at Southern Illinois University. He also worked as a research economist for the Federal Power Commission from 1969 to 1970.

Mr. President, on behalf of the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, I am pleased to recommend Senate confirmation of Charles G. Stalon to be a member of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is considered and confirmed.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that it may be in order to reconsider the vote by which each nomination was confirmed with a single motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I make that motion.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the President be immediately notified of the confirmation of these nominations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate return to the consideration of legislative business.

PROGRAM

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, on Monday next, the Senate will convene at 11 a.m. After the recognition of the two leaders under the standing order, two Senators will be recognized on special orders, after the execution of which, there will be a time for the transaction of routine morning business.

It has been announced that the leadership will ask the Senate to turn to the consideration of the so-called Public Law 480 conference report at that time. It is also hoped that the Senate can reach and dispose of two other items on Monday, to wit, the child restraint bill and the math-science bill.

Mr. President, I expect votes throughout the day on Monday. At this time I do not anticipate a late day on Monday, but Senators should be aware that late evenings are possible at any time next week in view of the fact that this is the last week before our scheduled recess prior to the Fourth of July.

ORDERS FOR MONDAY, JUNE 25, 1984

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I shall propose a unanimous-consent agreement with respect to an adjournment of the Senate for the consideration of the minority leader at this time. I believe it is in the usual form, what has become the usual form for this language, and I hope there is no objection.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that if the Senate adjourns today, when it next convenes it do so on Monday, June 25, 1984, at the hour of 12 noon, and that at that time the reading of the Journal be dispensed with, that no resolutions come over under the rule, and that the call of the calendar be dispensed with; and that following the recognition of the two leaders under the standing order, there be special orders in favor of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. PROXMIRE] and the Senator from Arizona [Mr. DECONCINI] for not to exceed 15 minutes each, to be followed by a period for the transaction of routine morning business of not longer than 30 minutes in length in which Senators may speak for not more than 5 minutes each; and provided further that the morning hour be deemed to have expired.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I shall not object.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I amend the request that states 12 o'clock to 11 a.m.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the majority leader?

Mr. BYRD. There is no objection. I withdraw my reservation.

ORDER FOR ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 11 A.M. MONDAY, JUNE 25, 1984

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it stand in adjournment until the hour of 11 a.m. Monday next.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SCHEDULE FOR MONDAY

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, let me say before we get into the routine business that on Monday, after the two leaders are recognized and the special orders are executed and morning business is closed, it is the intention of the leadership to ask the Senate to turn to the consideration of the so-called Public Law 480 conference report, which is the conference report to accompany House Joint Resolution 492 making urgent supplemental appropriations.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the distinguished majority leader yield?

Mr. BAKER. I yield.

Mr. BYRD. I appreciate the majority leader's intention to proceed to that conference report. Would it be possible to get that consent today and now?

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I had earlier indicated to the minority leader that I would like to do that, but on checking, I find that I have one notation on my calendar and I cannot reach the Senator who made that notation. I do not believe that it is going to pose any problem because it is simply a "to notify" notation. But in fidelity to the requirements of the calendar, I prefer to do it this way, if the minority leader will understand.

Mr. BYRD. I certainly understand. In any event the distinguished majority leader could move to take up that privileged matter so Senators can be assured, can they not, that the Senate will be, one way or another, on that measure on Monday?

Mr. BAKER. Yes. Mr. President, the minority leader is absolutely right. I would prefer to do it by unanimous consent so that we preserve the status of the math-science bill but if necessary it would be the intention of the leadership on this side to move to the conference report which, as the minority leader pointed out, is a privileged matter and could be dealt with, I believe, very promptly.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the distinguished majority leader.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, in addition to the Public Law 480 conference report, it would be the hope of the leadership on this side that we could also do the math-science bill on Monday, which is Calendar Order No. 107, S. 1285, and the child restraint bill which carries the drunk driving legislation as an amendment, and that is Calendar Order 832, H.R. 4616. Both those other matters are still in negotiation, but I think there is a fair chance that we might be able to work them in as well.

In any event, Senators should be on notice that we will go to the Public Law 480 conference report, and it is the intention of the leadership to attempt to reach the other two items on Monday as well.

SCHEDULE FOR TUESDAY

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, let me say a word about Tuesday. If we cannot get to the child restraint bill on Monday, it would be the intention of the leadership on this side to try to reach that bill on Tuesday.

I have indicated to a number of Senators, some on both sides of the aisle, that I would forgo trying to do that this week but that Tuesday is as far as I am willing to postpone action on that measure next week.

So I do anticipate that late Monday if possible or in any event on Tuesday the leadership on this side will ask the Senate to turn to the consideration of that bill.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, will the majority leader yield for a question?

Mr. BAKER. I yield.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, is it the majority leader's intention to go late on Monday night; does he know at this time?

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, it depends. Let me say to the distinguished Senator from Michigan that I prefer not to go late on Monday, but I will consult with the minority leader and we will sort of try to figure out the week when we return and see what we need to do. But I would not now predict a late session on Monday.

Mr. LEVIN. I thank the majority leader.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I have nothing further.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL MONDAY, JUNE 25, 1984, AT 11 A.M.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, if the minority leader does not seek recognition, and he appears not to be, and no other Senator does, I move, in accordance with the order previously entered, that the Senate now stand in adjournment until Monday next at the hour of 11 a.m.

The motion was agreed to; and at 7:36 p.m., the Senate adjourned until Monday, June 25, 1984, at 11 a.m.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

A REPORT ON A TRIP TO POLAND, CZECHOSLOVAKIA, AND HUNGARY

HON. GILLIS W. LONG

OF LOUISIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, June 21, 1984

● Mr. LONG of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, recently the Honorable Arnold A. Saltzman led a delegation representing the Business Council of the United Nations on a 10-day diplomatic mission to Poland, Czechoslovakia, and Hungary. While in these three Eastern bloc countries, Mr. Saltzman met with economic policymakers from various ministries, banks, and bureaus and with top political people within each country. They discussed trade, economic reform, defense, and bilateral political relationships in a frank and productive manner.

Mr. Saltzman, who is the chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Vista Resources, Inc., has carried out high-level diplomatic and economic assignments for four Presidents. His report of this recent trip to Eastern Europe takes on added significance in view of our tenuous relationship with the Soviet Union and general tensions with the Eastern bloc European countries.

I commend Mr. Saltzman's report and recommendations to the attention of my colleagues:

TRIP TO POLAND, CZECHOSLOVAKIA, AND HUNGARY: A REPORT AND RECOMMENDATIONS

This report concerns ten days that I spent with high-level officials in three communist countries, Poland, Czechoslovakia, and Hungary. These governments invited me to bring a delegation representing the Business Council of the United Nations to discuss political and economic issues that affect their relations with the United States. Our meetings involved policymakers in the Ministries of Foreign Affairs, Finance, and Commerce as well as the central banks and planning bureaus.

I was received with great courtesy by these officials, and our own ambassadors to the three countries received us graciously. The conversations were direct and marked by tough, frank exchanges that would not have been possible if I still represented our country. Although no Soviet diplomat attended the meetings, the Soviet Union was a crucial factor in these discussions.

My analysis of the trip is based on a consideration of the fact that we will spend almost a trillion dollars in the next three years arming ourselves. The substantial increases in the defense budget and the corresponding increase in the budget deficit are primarily reflections of how this administration perceives our situations vis a vis the Warsaw Pact countries in Eastern Europe.

It is essential for Americans to understand that there is no monolithic communist bloc contesting against the United States. There are differences resulting from national heritage and aspirations: Communist Poland is not the Soviet Unions' broker nor is Hungary Romania's and all have different perceptions of how their socialist economic systems should function. Hungary is developing a substantial degree of economic decentralization, leaving room for profit incentive, and individual decision making. Czechoslovakia is far less decentralized and the Soviet Union is committed to the rigidities of almost total central state planning. Poland had begun a policy of economic decentralization in the industrial area. It is continuing despite labor problems, shortages of supplies, materials, and capital. Agriculture is much less rigidly contolled. Decentralization or economic reform as they call it, is bringing political, social, and economic change. It is reducing the power of the central bureaucracy because the managers of the cooperatives are chosen by all the workers instead of appointed by the government. It is reducing government control over people's lives and is spawning an entrepreneurial attitude. In Hungary half the economy is decentralized, and in Poland 82 percent of agricultural production is "private", and not collectivized.

But none of this means that any of these countries intends to give up its form of government. One can debate whether the people of these countries would prefer to abandon socialism. But even if they so desired, their governments do not, nor would the Soviet Union allow such defections. Unless the United States is prepared to send troops to support a people's rebellion, which we proved in 1956 in Hungary we were not, then our present policies in many of these countries are stupid because they are counterproductive.

There is a general affection tinged with envy for the American people. Conversely, there is an active dislike and fear of our present government. Our leaders are perceived as militants who wish to impose their will on other countries, whether in Eastern Europe or Central America. This applies not only to President Reagan but to Vice President Bush, and even more to Secretary of Defense Weinberger, it applies less to Secretary of State Schultz only because he does not speak intemperately.

There has always been mistrust, and there have always been problems between the communist and capitalist countries and especially with the United States as leader of the democratic capitalist nations. Why then this recent burst of superantagonism and fear? It is not only a product of our military buildup and the development of Cruise and Pershing missiles in Germany, Italy, and Britain. There exists the perception of a fundamental change in U.S. policy that is directed toward pressuring these communist countries to distance themselves from the Soviet Union and also to liberalize and decentralize their economies and provide greater freedom of expression for their people. Our State Department has told the governments of Czechoslovakia and Poland that they must improve human rights and liberalize their economies if they want to get M.F.N. (most favored nation) treatment for their exports and lift the embargo on nonstrategic industrial shipments to Poland. Those countries find our position on human rights hypocritical because Romania has been accorded M.F.N. despite a brutally repressive system toward its people, which makes Poland and Czechoslovakia look good by comparison. Romania has been accorded M.F.N. status, these officials believe, because it sometimes deviates from the Soviet Union's international strategies. These officials consider our pressure intrusions in their internal affairs. How they handle dissenters and how they elect to run their economies are outcomes of their political and judicial systems and not subjects for U.S. economic and political pressures.

One can debate what U.S. pressure beyond moral suasion is appropriate when a nation is dealing with its own citizens. What is more pertinent and less debatable is whether such pressures achieve the administration's objectives of moving Poland and Czechoslovakia away from the Soviet Union.

Item 1: In the case of Czechoslovakia, our policy of impeding trade has (a) reduced such trade to a trickle and (b) kept Czechoslovakia a firm ally of the Soviet Union.

Item 2: Poland has just signed a long-term pact with the Soviet Union covering trade, technology, scientific investigation and so on. This will bring Poland more firmly into the Soviet orbit, precisely the opposite of what we want. Poland's officials have complained bitterly that in the seventies they produced goods designed for Western markets, bought and installed machinery to improve their industrial output and marketing arrangements with U.S. companies. U.S. economic strictures have reduced American trade to one third of what it was, have prevented Poles from getting spare parts to run their factories, have interrupted commercial relationships built over years and have had a severe effect on their G.N.P. Some of their problems, Polish officials say, result from their own inefficiencies, which they are trying to address, but much of their trouble is U.S. inspired (about 10 billion dollars, they assert). "It was a mistake to rely on the good will of the United States and we won't get trapped like that again", say Polish leaders.

There was, of course, the expected complaint about the introduction of Pershing and Cruise missiles in Western Europe and the real fears that these engender. Obviously the Poles are not frightened by the Soviet SS 20s poised at Western Europe, but I made clear that the Germans, Italians, Danes, English, and Benelux countries are. For the record, I remarked that the United States delivered Cruise and Pershing missiles after requests by our European allies and then only after the Soviet Union refused to remove its SS 20s. Thus a discussion of missiles and Voice of America broadcasts, which distrub them, occasioned no apology from our side. I stated that it would be more productive to discuss bilateral issues that apply to their countries individually with the U.S. and leave the Soviet-United States problems aside.

In summary Czech and Polish officials believe that we have "hit" them instead of the Soviet Union because it is relatively easier to do and because they are part of the Warsaw Pact. The Czechs added that the West abandoned them in Munich in 1937 and questioned if they left the Soviet orbit, what true friends they could rely on?

The messages that we bring to our State Department are (1) nations that talk, don't fight; (2) our policies toward Czechoslovakia and Poland should not be the same as those toward the Soviets because we are solidifying instead of dividing them; (3) rigid communist central planning is not working, which will increasingly make these countries decentralize and liberalize—not because we have forced it but because they find it necessary to change. They will come closer to our economic system with correspondingly greater internal freedoms because ours works better, and they know it. The United States did not create the "Solidarity" movement in Poland; their own inefficient system did.

A number of positions taken by our host governments are important to recount. Leaders in Hungary, the most liberal of the three communist countries visited, remarked that (a) Hungary is and will remain, a faithful member of the Warsaw Pact; (b) Hungary relies substantially on imports for most materials, including energy; thus world dislocations (i.e., Iran and Iraq) or world tensions disturb it greatly; (c) although relations with the United States are "normal" U.S. rigidities in financing exports to Hungary are tougher than those of other Western nations. As a result, they are now buying soy beans from Brazil instead of the United States and altering long established commercial relationships; (d) they believe that the United States pushed Poland more deeply into the Soviet orbit and can not understand our behavior; (e) their new reforms apply to judicial and legislative areas as well as economic. For example, an individual or a company can now sue the state with impunity; (f) under the new economic system, state planning will be macroeconomic, and there will be general targets. The marketplace, world prices and profit objectives of individual companies will increasingly determine what is made, exported, imported, invested, and so on. This system will take Hungary farther away from the rigidities of doctrinaire socialism under which the individuals' satisfaction derives from being part of a state that owns everything. Now the individual has personal incentives. His needs and desires are more self-fulfilling: his satisfaction is greater; (g) there are tensions between Warsaw Pact members: For example, the Hungarian minority problem in Romania upsets Hungary, and trade negotiations with Russia are frequently though; (h) new "economic reform" weakens communist authority. A company is now managed by someone chosen by the workers who own the company. Mangers are either elected from within or recruited but are no longer appointed by the party minister. This process weakens the authority of the bureaucracy, which means the state. A confrontation may be looming between the cooperatives and the party in response to the momentum of the entrepreneurial society. The government intends to remain communist but needs the accomplishment of a market oriented economy. So far a delicate accommodation exists.

Czechoslovakia is experimenting with some degree of economic decentralization but far less than Hungry. The Czechs have advantages because they have more raw materials, a longer tradition of industrialization and thus less dependence on agriculture, and a more advanced technology. The Czechs were particularly gracious in making available technology. The Czechs were particularly gracious in making available to us their deputy foreign minister, foreign trade minister, chairman of the central bank, chairman of the State Planning Commission, secretary general of the Chamber of Commerce and Industry, among others, for two days of deliberations, questions, and comments. Among their comments were (a) they have very little trade with the United States because U.S. policies discourage it; although they do about four billion dollars annually with Western European; (b) Czechoslovakia is a staunch ally of the Soviet Union and will remain so. Minister Murin pointed out that the West had thrown his country to Hitler in 1937 and Russia was the only country the Czechs felt was a loyal friend; (c) the United States would not gain if Czechoslovakia left the Soviet orbit because it would disturb the "balance of forces" and could cause heightened tensions between the United States and the Soviet Union; (d) Czechoslovakia is credit worthy; it has not contracted large debts to the West. Its economy grew at a modest rate of about 3 percent (slightly less in the last years of world recession). Agriculture is growing moderately at 1 to 2 percent. By not overexpanding, Czechoslovakia achieved a surplus in foreign trade in 1982 and 1983; (e) Czechoslovakia would prefer better relations with the United States but not at the expense of changing socialist policies or internal security; (f) Czechoslovakia has continued to experience rebuffs from the United States, including a series of demands relating to settling old debts (which are settled) and cultural exchanges. After the Czechs have complied with the U.S. requests for changes, the United States has failed to conclude agreements or delayed them; (g) few U.S. business leaders visit Czechoslovakia. Because U.S. custom duties exclude a 30% premium for Czech goods, normal trade is not practical. They would welcome deals in such fields as science and technology in which they believe they can contribute as much as they receive.

Polish leaders in foreign affairs, economics and foreign trade engaged us in tough conversations. Although personally courteous, these leaders seemed frustrated and expressed hostility for the policies of the United States. They said that (a) the U.S. government—Reagan, Bush, Weinberger and the U.S. media maintain a barrage of anti-Polish propaganda, (b) the real U.S. purpose is to destroy socialism, and the "Solidarity propaganda" is an example. They released Walesa and many other Solidarity members except eleven and offered to release those eleven in return for their promise not to try to subvert the government. The eleven have refused, preferring to stay in jail to maintain a rallying point for social unrest; (c) they are attempting to decentralize and liberalize their economy not to placate the United States but because they need an infusion of entrepreneurial and market related expertise; (d) the denial of most favored nation status and the imposition of trade sanctions cut American trade by two thirds and made it more difficult to repay their Western debts which they are determined to do; (e) their economy foundered in the late seventies and has continued to do so in the eighties because of the greatly increased oil prices, the worldwide recession, the large increase in U.S. interest rates on their debts plus their own overexpansion and inefficiencies of production and management; (f) these problems and corresponding decreases in the standard of living created the "Solidarity" movement, which they tolerated and endeavored to deal with on economic terms. When this movement became political, threatening revolutionary political changes, the government could not permit its continuation. U.S. economic sanctions in support of internal social unrest constituted an intrusion in Poland's internal affairs and dealt a further blow to Poland's already troubled economy (g) deprived of trade and spare parts for machinery sold by the United States on credit; pressed to repay debts and claiming that U.S. actions hurt by more than ten billion dollars, Poland is orienting itself more closely to the Soviet Union. Polish leaders have recently concluded a major long-range treaty with the Soviet Union extending through 1995 and beyond. It constitutes a general framework for trade, technological assistance, scientific exchange, and so on and it provides for a series of individual agreements between Polish and Soviet entities. Poland will, as a result, be pulled deeper into the Soviet Union's orbit; (h) Polish leaders intend to pursue economic reform (decentralization) despite the hardships of their staggering economy and despite their new close ties being developed with the Soviet Union.

My conclusions are (a) the United States will not succeed in forcing any of these three countries to weaken its adherence to the Warsaw Pact; (b) the bellicose language used by this administration is counterproductive. The more pressure we use, the easier it is for communist governments to propagandize their people, picturing the United States as a militaristic bully; (c) the greatest weapon we have is the failure of the communist economic system which is not working and which they need to shore up through the use of market forces and individual profit incentives. Without U.S. pressure they will be forced to liberalize and in so doing will weaken the doctrinaire state controlled system; (d) we should talk and trade. We should not threaten, pressure, nor provide unusual help. We should take moral positions without imposing sanctions regarding human rights. We should certainly keep transmitting Voice of America and Radio Free Europe broadcasts. We should seek accords on arms control. In summary we should walk softly and carry an adequate big stick.●

LETTER CRITICIZING ACID RAIN DAMAGE

HON. GERRY SIKORSKI

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, June 21, 1984

● Mr. SIKORSKI. Mr. Speaker, several weeks ago the National Coal Association and the Edison Electric Institute distributed a letter to Members of Congress criticizing a new report by the National Wildlife Federation on the damage acid rain is causing in non-New England States. I believe the letter misrepresents both the problem of acid rain and the report.

Given the importance of this issue to our environment, I am submitting for the RECORD a response sent to me from the National Wildlife Federation. As the letter points out, the evidence on this issue is clear. The acidity of precipitation in many areas is increasing because of manmade pollutants, particularly coal-fired utility plants.

It is time to stop raising bogus issues and address the serious problem of acid rain.

NATIONAL WILDLIFE FEDERATION,
Washington, DC, June 7, 1984.

Hon. GERRY SIKORSKI,
U.S. Representative, Washington, DC.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN SIKORSKI: As you are aware, the National Wildlife Federation recently released a report documenting the impacts of acid rain on 21 non-New England states. The report provided dramatic evidence that acid rain isn't just New England's problem anymore, and attracted nationwide media attention. This, in turn, elicited a reaction from the National Coal Association and Edison Electric Institute—in the form of a joint, May 4th, letter distributed to members of Congress. While I have received no inquiries regarding the letter, it does raise several questions—a few of which merit brief response.

(1) EEI/NCA contend that "NWP's assertion of abnormally acidic precipitation . . . is . . . misleading" because it assumes natural rainfall has a pH of 5.6. In actuality, they claim, natural rainfall may have a pH value ranging "from pH 4.9 to 6.5"

Neutral precipitation has a pH of 7.0. When rainfall mixes with the carbon dioxide naturally present in the atmosphere, the carbonic acid causes most rainfall to be slightly acidic with a pH of 5.6. Based upon climatological conditions, the pH of unpolluted rainfall may vary slightly from this level. If one chooses to accept the contention that normal rainfall has a pH as low as 4.9, the fact remains that precipitation hundreds (instead of thousands) of time more acidic than normal—more acid than lemon juice—has fallen in States as geographically distant as West Virginia, California, and Pennsylvania.[1]

(2) EEI/NCA dispute the "NWF assertion . . . 'that SO_2 emissions have tripled since 1950'". They contend that SO_2 emissions have actually increased from "22.5 million short tons in 1950 . . . to 23.6 million tons in 1982."

The National Wildlife Federation press release which accompanied the report states that "SO_2 emissions from eastern power plants have tripled since 1950" (emphasis added). This statement is correct. SO_2 emissions from power plants located in the eastern 31 states have increased from 4.3 million tons in 1950 to 15.2 million tons in 1980."[2] Some copies of the report were released with a statement in the introduction that: "SO_2 emissions have tripled since 1950" (the qualifier: "from eastern power plants", was inadvertently omitted.) This error was quickly corrected in subsequently released copies of the report.

(3) EEI/NCA contend they ". . . can see no basis for NWF's assertion that SO_2 emissions 'are projected to increase another 2-3 million tons annually by the year 2000' ".

This NWF projection was taken directly from the U.S.-Canada Memorandum of Intent on Transboundary Pollution (Final Report, June 1982). The data presented in the report were compiled as a joint project of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and Environmental Canada. These projections clearly show that SO_2 emissions are projected to increase from 24.1 million tons in 1980, to 26.6 million tons in the year 2000. In addition, NO_x emissions (which are the primary cause of acid rain in the far west), are projected to increase from 19.3 to 24.1 million tons. (Copies of these projections, extracted from the report, are attached.) It is useful to note that in both cases, the primary source of this pollution is the electric utility industry.

In their joint letter to Members of Congress, the Edison Electric Institute and the National Coal Association are again attempting to divert attention from the real issue at hand: Over 24 million tons of sulfur dioxide is emitted each year in the U.S. Given the broad, documented impacts this pollution is having on natural and human resources—that is millions of tons too much.

Sincerely,

STEVEN HOWARDS,
Legislative Representative, Pollution and Toxic Substances Division.●

ECONOMIC SUCCESS DOESN'T DEPEND ON MANAGEMENT FADS

HON. BOB CARR

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, June 21, 1984

● Mr. CARR. Mr. Speaker, much has been written about how America can achieve economic success by using one management scheme or another. I would like to present a success story which has nothing to do with the latest fad in management theory. Judy Cameron of White Lake Township in Michigan has built a business through hard work and determination. She has made a new life for herself and her family, and employs 14 other people as well.

The following article from the June 4, 1984, Detroit Free Press tells Judy Cameron's story:

PROFILE: JUDY CAMERON, SUCCESS IN THE GRAPHICS BUSINESS

(By Alan Abrams)

When Judy Cameron set up a typesetting business in her Milford home in 1975, she was afraid the two heavy typesetting machines in her living room might go crashing through the floor.

Instead, Cameron's company, IT Unlimited Inc., soared through the roof, financially.

Today, Cameron has six computerized typesetting machines in a Lathrup Village suite of offices, home to her fast-growing typesetting, keylining and graphic arts production firm.

Cameron, 40, divorced mother of three (son John, 20, is IT's bookkeeper and daughter Jody, 18, is a company account executive), was one of the first women in the Detroit area to invade the male domain of typesetting. Of IT's 14 employes, 11 are women.

Beginning with $45,715 in sales in 1975, IT's first year in operation, the corporation has grown steadily: Sales in 1983 totaled $430,812.

Cameron is the oldest of four children of an assembly line worker at the Ford plant in Livonia. She grew up in the Seven Mile and Southfield area of Detroit's northwest side and attended public and Catholic schools. While a student at Benedictine High, Cameron edited The Raven, one of the few school newspapers typeset and printed by journalism students. Although she went on to Marygrove College to study chemistry, that first smudge of printer's ink was to leave an indelible mark on her future.

To help pay her tuition, Cameron took a part-time job at Detroit's Oak Offset printers, owned and operated by Virginia DeBerry. When Cameron's fiance was sent with the army to Germany during the Berlin Wall crisis, she followed him. They were married in Basel, Switzerland, and lived in Germany. John was born in Heidelberg in 1964, and Jody followed a year and a half later while the Camerons were stationed in Williamsburg, Va.

When the family moved to the Washington suburb of Arlington, Va., Judy Cameron took a job with a printer. The Camerons returned to Detroit, where her husband started a trucking company and she continued to work for printing companies.

After they moved to Milford in 1974, she gave birth to Jessica, who contracted meningitis; a few months later, the marriage broke down when her husband left.

Stunned by the turn of events and worried about Jessica's illness, Cameron found herself unable to work. One day, a notice was nailed to her front door: Her house was to be foreclosed and sold at a sheriff's auction. And Cameron had fallen behind on her utility bills. She believes that "the only reason our electricity and heat weren't cut off was because (the utilities had policies not) to do so while there was an infant under 18 months in the house."

She applied for emergency welfare and was receiving $33 a month on which to feed her family.

A few months later, Cameron had marshaled her strength and was able to work for another typesetting company. Even with her salary, she still needed an additional $250 a month just to pay bills.

Cameron took inventory and realized she had few marketable skills other than printing and typesetting.

Virginia DeBerry at Oak Offset advised Cameron to go into business for herself. But how was a divorced mother of three with no credit record, unpaid utility bills and a barely averted house foreclosure going to find financing? Cameron determined that she would buy a typesetting machine and set up her own business at home while continuing to work at her full-time job.

But there was no way a commercial bank would lend her the money. And trying to get a loan from the Small Business Administration was just as hopeless.

Cameron borrowed $800 from her father. Using the loan as down payment, she bought a new $8,500 IBM typesetter in [1] According to the NWF report, West Virginia has received rainfall with a pH of 1.5; California has monitored fog with a pH of 1.5; and Pennsylvania has received rainfall with pH 2.3. All 21 non-New England states analyzed in the report, have received rainfall with a pH of less than 4.9.

March 1975 and set it up in her living room. IBM did not send her an operator's manual, so she taught herself how to use the machine.

The business did so well that a month later there were two typesetting machines in the living room. "I was always worried about having all of that heavy equipment in the house," Cameron remembers, "I was afraid that it would all go through the floor."

By Thanksgiving, Cameron had quit her job and was devoting her attention to IT Unlimited, which had two full-time employees. She repaid her father and moved her equipment to an office building.

What made her company such a success? In addition to Cameron's personalized service and eye for detail, there was her sense of timing.

Cameron's decision to set up her own typesetting business dovetailed with the paper explosion of the mid-1970s. Suddenly, every organization with more members than could meet in a telephone booth decided to issue a newsletter or monthly newspaper. And because of new technology, typesetting was cheaper; no longer was it a specialized service that only advertising agencies could afford.

Cameron incorporated IT Unlimited in 1977. By 1979, she began to take herself out of production work and started devoting some time to management. "I saw that we were more than just a group of people coming to an office and working together," says Cameron, "and I realized that somebody has to take charge and somebody has to manage."

IT Unlimited has an impressive list of clients, including a long list of non-profit service agencies, large printers who farm out assignments to IT for clients, and many of the area's Jewish oganizations. "Pioneer Women was one of our first accounts, and we still do their work today," says Cameron. She also does work for the Jewish Community Center, Hillel Day School, Akiva Hebrew Day School, the Holocaust Memorial Center, and some Orthodox Lubavitcher rabbis.

Cameron's clients praise her lavishly. Scott Brown, assistant executive director of the Jewish Community Center, says Cameron "runs an on-time business." Dr. Morton Plotnick, Brown's boss, puts it this way: "From a consumer perspective, she runs a quality operation."

Recently IT created packaging designs for new products ranging from incense boxes to automotive brushes. IT even produces ads.

Cameron would like to expand into design work. She would like to see IT "get away from being a typesetting company and become more of a graphics company. I have some excellent artists who do some really good work, but I just haven't pushed that aspect of the company. I'd like to take a job from start to finish—to take your rough ideas and present you with a finished product and say IT did all of this."

Cameron worked 16-hour days until recently and still takes work home every night. "I have guilt feelings about being a parent," she says. "And I try to spend time with my youngest daughter. My two older children are more like my friends now. My son has worked with me since he was 12 and started doing my bookkeeping. But I want all my kids to have some sort of trade. Jessica wants to become a veterinarian and not follow me into my business like the other two. She's going to have to learn how to do something in case she doesn't make it through all those years in college. Who knows what I would have done if I had not known a trade?"

In late April, Cameron signed the partnership papers for a new venture, the Quorum, "a business guidance group." Cameron explains. "We see our market as either those just beginning a business or those threshold businesses that would benefit from outside trouble-shooting analysis." Her partners are attorney Nina Dodge Abrams, a partner in Schwartz, Knauer, Meisner and Abrams; CPA Judith Trepeck of Grey, Trepeck & Cohen; and cash flow consultant Tamara Van Wormer, owner of Services-on-Site. Cameron's responsibility is in graphics.

Cameron's involvement in helping others solve business problems is a logical extension of what she sees as her greatest skill: An ability to trouble-shoot.

"It's more of a skill than a technique," she says. "You just have to sit back and analyze. I zero in on the problem and see what I can offer as a solution."

What does Cameron see in her future? "I want to increase my sales," she replies, "and I can do so without increasing our fixed overhead. We're working two shifts now, so there's no reason why we can't fill them out a little bit. I think we've got nowhere to go but up. If we're going to make a move forward, now is the time to do it."

"I guess I have to feel proud when I look back and see how far my business had come," Cameron said. "Sometimes you can get hung up on the everyday dealings in business and the everyday problems and you neglect to see how far you've come.

"I've come a long way in 10 years," Cameron said. ●

A TRIBUTE TO DON BIALON

HON. WILLIAM O. LIPINSKI

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, June 21, 1984

● Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Speaker, I would like to pay tribute to a respected citizen of Illinois' Fifth Congressional District, which I am privileged to represent, and he is Don Bialon. Don has consistently shown a deep concern and unselfish willingness to help his neighbors on the southwest side.

Don Bialon has been a long time resident of the Garfield Ridge area and his participation in causes and campaigns to improve the community have long been his trademark.

I join with the residents of the Fifth Congressional District in paying tribute to Don Bialon for his work in our behalf, and I would like to introduce into today's Congressional Record a newspaper article honoring Don Bialon upon his receipt of the Ray McDonald Community Achievement Award.

The article follows:

[From the Midway Sentinel]

McDonald Award to Bialon

For many years Don Bialon has been involved in various community programs and has demonstrated a deep concern and unselfish willingness to help his neighbors on the southwest side. His goals have always centered around improving the quality of life in the 23rd Ward. The Midway Sentinel is extremely honored to name Don Bialon as our monthly recipient of the Raymond McDonald Community Achievement Award.

Donald Bialon has been a long time resident of the Garfield Ridge Area. Mr. Bialon was born in this area and attended the Mark Twain Grammer School, the Central Y.M.C.A. Hgh School of which he graduated in 1939. He attended DePaul University for two years before being drafted into the U.S. Army where he spent the next three years serving as a Army Medic.

Mr. Bialon married Helen Dzialowy, a local girl and has raised a family of three sons and one daughter. Mr. Bialon's daughter is deceased but his sons are active in the present business which was started by Mr. Bialon's parents Mr. and Mrs. Felix Bialon. Originally a General Store it has grown and developed into the present day Midwest Department Store.

The Bialon Family as a long time resident and pioneer in the Garfield business community has seen the many changes that have taken place in this area. Don took an interest in the family business at about the age of 15 and has helped it grow along with the community.

He has taken an active role in several area organizations including the Garfield Ridge Chamber of Commerce which he served as Treasurer, Past President and Director of the Midway Kiwanis, Director in the Century Savings and Loan located in Garfield Ridge, Member of the Knights of Columbus, and the Chicago Chamber of Commerce to name a few.

Mr. Bialon has enjoyed living in the family atmosphere of the Garfield Ridge Area for several years. He has seen many residents come and go but the area has never lost its friendly and neighborly attitude. "The people of Garfield are proud of the Garfield Ridge area and try to make it an exceptional place to live and raise a family."

The efforts and unlimited involvement in causes or campaigns to improve the community have long been the trademarks of Don Bialon and it is with that sense of dedication that we honor him this month. ●

THE 24TH MEXICO-UNITED STATES INTERPARLIAMENTARY CONFERENCE

HON. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, June 21, 1984

● Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, the 24th Mexico-United States Interparliamentary Conference, which was held in our Nation's Capitol on May 17-19, 1984, was led by the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. de la Garza] and the Senator from Kansas [Mrs. Kassebaum]. Through their cooperative efforts, I presented a paper on our bilateral efforts to combat drug trafficking and drug abuse before the Conference's Political Committee, which was chaired by Senator Kassebaum and Senator Antonio Riva Placio Lopez of Mexico.

On three occasions in the 24-year history of this bilateral conference, legislators have adopted resolutions relating to complex issues governing the relations between our two nations, and in all three instances these resolutions pertained to drug-related issues. In those three instances, I am pleased that my papers on drug trafficking and drug abuse were the catalytic force that helped formulate those resolutions. In 1977, the parliamentarians adopted the Hermosillo Declaration on Combating the Traffic in Drugs at the International Level; in 1982, the Interparliamentary Conference adopted the Santa Barbara accord committing both nations to elevate to the highest priority the problems emanating from narcotics production, trafficking and abuse and pledging both nations to develop a comprehensive, coordinated regional drug strategy; and at the recent 24th bilateral Interparliamentary Conference, the parliamentarians adopted a resolution establishing a working group to assist the conference in its efforts to combat drug trafficking and drug abuse.

The objectives of the working group, which is to report annually to our bilateral conference, are:

First, to follow up on tasks necessary to achieve in both nations campaigns against the illicit production of narcotics;

Second, to analyze existing agreements for the purpose of bringing them up to date;

Third, to use the findings of the working group to formulate recommendations to the executives responsible for their implementation;

Fourth, to recommend measures, including drug education campaigns designed to warn about the dangers of drug abuse; and

Fifth, to ensure that modern instruments and technological advances are provided to improve the efforts in each nation to effectively combat the trafficking of illicit drugs.

The time to implement these well-intentioned resolutions is upon us. Nations throughout the world must recognize that it is their national interest to join in a collective manner to pool their resources, personnel, equipment, and funds to formulate global and regional drug strategies that would effectively prevent and control the menace of drug trafficking and the debilitating effects of drug abuse.

Mr. Speaker, in an effort to inform my colleagues of the details of the Interparliamentary conference's newly created working group, I am at this point in the Record inserting the complete text of my statement before the conference's political committee and the complete text of the resolution that was adopted by the delegations of both nations at the 24th Mexico-United States Interparliamentary Conference:

Statement of Hon. Benjamin A. Gilman

Mr. Chairman, distinguished legislators from Mexico and the United States, I am pleased to participate again with our Mexican colleagues in the 24th Mexico-United States Interparliamentary Conference and would also like to join my colleagues in welcoming the distinguished President of Mexico, Miguel de la Madrid, to our Nation's Capital. His visit, which ended yesterday, represents a commitment between the presidents of our two nations, like our annual Interparliamentary Conference, to meet once a year. Our annual interparliamentary conference which has been in existence for nearly a quarter of century provides a unique forum and opportunity for us, as friends and neighbors, and as elected officials, to discuss candidly how we can best resolve the intricate political, economic and social issues confronting our two nations.

Narcotics trafficking and drug abuse is creating havoc not only for our two nations but also for nations throughout the world. As the Ranking Minority Member of the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, which is chaired by my distinguished colleague from New York (Mr. Charles B. Rangel), and as a Member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, I wish that I could report that the drug problem has diminished since we met last year in Puebla, Mexico. Instead of getting better, the problems of narcotics trafficking and drug abuse have grown worse.

Drug traffic and abuse is adversely affecting the political, economic and social institutions of nations throughout the world. Just in the United States alone, narcotics trafficking has reached a staggering $90 billion activity . . . and this estimated $90 billion illicit, untaxed, drug trafficking activity is a conservative figure. These narcodollars exceed the sales of our largest industrial corporation, Exxon, whose sales last year reached $88.5 billion and whose assets of nearly $63 billion rank number one among the 500 largest United States industrial corporations.

Narcotics trafficking and drug abuse is not a Mexican problem or a United States problem; rather, it is a global problem. It is growing by leaps and bounds, adversely affecting the health of citizens throughout the world and undermining the political, economic and social institutions of nations in every region of the world.

The international criminal syndicates and the drug traffickers are becoming more ruthless and daring. For example, last month . . . on April 30th, 1984 . . . the Columbian Minister of Justice, Rodrigo Lara Bonilla, was gunned down by the drug traffickers while on his way home from work. the Justice Minister was instrumental in helping his nation conduct a world record-breaking seizure of 12.5 tons of cocaine worth an estimated $1.8 billion. He was also a leader in promoting Colombia's recent decision to conduct experimental testing of herbicidal eradication methods to eliminate the cultivation of marihuana and coca. Under the leadership of Colombian President Belisano Betancur, that nation has declared a state of seige and has launched a massive drive against the narcotics traffickers. In the two weeks since Lara Bonilla was murdered, more than 100 suspects have been arrested and several drug traffickers have been extradited. President Betancur has requested a world pact to wage war against these international traffickers, a proposal that the United States and Venezuela have joined.

Furthermore, the devastating effect that narcotics trafficking is having on our institutions is clearly reflected by President Betancur's statement that was made shortly before the assassination of the Colombian Minister of Justice. He stated:

"I insist that we are faced with a new, more lethal menace, because it does not manifest itself solely in a classic revolt against legitimate authority, but rather with its startling strategy and plan of action attempts to overpower the state practically as a secondary objective because it first accomplishes the stage of demoralization by means of money; with a society's core destroyed in this manner, the state falls almost on its own."

Under the leadership of Chairman Rangel, last August our Narcotics Select Committee visited Mexico as part of its fact-finding misson to Latin America. We had the opportunity to meet with your distinguished Attorney General Garcia Ramirez and to fly over the rugged mountainous region of Michoacan/Guerrero to see and to learn at first-hand how your drug law enforcement officials conduct their marihuana eradication projects. We are deeply impressed by their dedicated efforts, and we admire their expertise in conducting their herbicidal spray operations. As our Narcotics Select Committee stated in its forthcoming report on its misson to Mexico:

"The Mexican Government has built the world's finest aerial crop eradication program. Its size, professionalism, competence, performance and experience make it the world leader in this technique, which the Select Committee regards as an absolute essential to destroying illicit opium poppy, coca, and marihuana cultivation. The work of the Mexican Government has been an enormous benefit to the people to the United States. As always, Mexico has been our 'Good Neighbor.'"

Mexico is the only nation in the Western Hemisphere that has been able to develop a plan to eradicate the illicit producton of opium and marihuana. This can be a model for all nations to emulate, and we would hope that you would invite other nations to learn from your expertise.

By working together. . . by pooling our resources, funds, personnel and skills. . . we can win the "war" on drug traffickers and drug abuse. In 1983, Mexican law enforcement officials seized 50 kilos of opium gum; by working together and sharing information, Mexican law enforcement agents seized an additional 35 kilos of opium gum. During that same year, Mexican officials seized 330 kilos of cocaine; by pooling our resources, Mexican officials seized 802 kilos of cocaine, or an increase of 234 percent.

Waging war against the drug traffickers is a never-ending battle. In 1975, approximately 75 percent of the heroin available in the United States originated from Mexico. By 1982 that figure was reduced to approximately 34 percent. Unfortunately, we are receiving reports that the international drug traffickers are once again looking to Mexico to become a major producer of heroin and we can only urge you to join with us to help combat this deadly drug from infecting all mankind. We also would urge an intensification of the Joint Mexico-United States Prosecutorial Program to more effectively prosecute drug traffickers from both our nations.

With respect to the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control (UNFDAS), last year only 28 nations, or less than 18 percent of the 157 member nations comprising the United Nations, contributed or pledged a meager $3,710,259; private contributions amounted to only $255,957 or a grand total of $3,966,212 for a global effort to combat the deadly menace of drug trafficking and drug abuse.

We commend the Government of Mexico for its contributions to the UN Drug Fund and would like to urge your government to take the lead in encouraging other Latin American nations to participate in this important UN effort. According to UNFDAC's 1983 report, only five Latin American and Caribbean nations contributed to the UN Drug Fund: Argentina ($17,300); Bahamas ($1,000); Guyana ($1,997); Mexico ($2,000); and Venezuela ($2,000) for a total of only $24,297—hardly enough to underwrite the cost of operating a drug treatment center.

To combat the hundreds of billions of dollars of illicit drugs that are infecting citizens throughout the world, nations of the international community annually scrape together a meager $5 million—$7 million to help UNFDAC conduct a global "war" on drug trafficking and drug abuse—hardly enough to provide a single high-speed coastal patrol boat.

Mexico and the United States continue to be allies and friends, especially on problems pertaining to narcotics cultivation, trafficking and abuse—problems that have not driven us apart but have brought us closer together. In 1977 and 1982 the delegates from both our nations attending our bilateral interparliamentary conferences adopted the Hermosillo Declaration on Narcotics Trafficking and the Santa Barbara Narcotics Accord, committing our nations to waging war on drug abuse and to elevating this issue to the highest priority level on our national agenda. We must now do more than adopt well-intended resolutions. We should develop a narcotics consultative mechanism between our two legislative bodies to help implement these two historic documents. The time for action is upon us. The citizens of both our nations expect this from us.

Your problems are our problems. Not only do we share a common border but we are inextricably bound to one another through our political, economic and social ties. Through mutual understanding, respect, and cooperation, we can solve the problems of drug trafficking, drug abuse and the other thorny issues confronting both our nations.

RESOLUTION ADOPTED IN THE POLITICAL COMMITTEE OF THE MEXICO-UNITED STATES INTERPARLIAMENTARY CONFERENCE HELD IN WASHINGTON, DC, ON MAY 19, 1984

Taking into account that it is necessary to maintain the efforts being carried out by both countries in the campaign against the trafficking of illicit drugs, because of the harm it causes and the need to maintain human and social solidarity on this problem, in addition to recognizing the efforts made by Mexico and the United States, it is considered convenient to establish a working group as part of the Mexico-United States Interparliamentary Conference, whose fundamental objective would be:

(1) to carry out all follow-up tasks that are necessary to achieve in both countries campaigns for the eradication of the illicit production of narcotics and the fight against narcotics, so that these would be more effective;

(2) to analyze, as appropriate, existing agreements in order to update them and to place the problem in the context they have established;

(3) to use the findings by the working group to be carried out by both countries, in order to formulate recommendations at the appropriate time, to the agencies of the respective Executives that have the operative ability to implement these recommendations;

(4) to recommend the necessary measures, including, in a major way, education campaigns designed to warn about the dangers of drug abuse; and

(5) to ensure that modern instruments and technological advances are provided in order to improve the efforts each country is carrying out in its jurisdiction to increase the effectiveness of the campaign to combat the trafficking of illicit drugs.

This working group will report annually to the Mexico-United States Interparliamentary Conference, so that the Conference will reach the necessary agreements based on the information provided.●

WRONG, REYNOLDS

HON. ROBERT GARCIA

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, June 21, 1984

● Mr. GARCIA. Mr. Speaker, by now, we are all familiar with the recent Supreme Court ruling in the case of the Memphis Firefighters, which favored seniority over affirmative action in layoffs. William Bradford Reynolds, Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights, interpreted the recent Supreme Court decision as a mandate to instruct Federal agencies to challenge the validity of affirmative action decisions and agreements as they apply to hiring and promotions.

As I read the decision, it only applies to layoffs and only layoffs. The following editorial by columnist William Raspberry which appeared in the June 15, 1984, Washington Post, accurately reflects my views on this volatile issue.

WRONG, REYNOLDS

(By William Raspberry)

Maybe William Bradford Reynolds knows something I don't. The man who has been called the assistant attorney general against civil rights claims to see in Tuesday's Supreme Court ruling a vindication of his own anti-affirmative action views. It may be that that is where the court is headed. But as this layman reads the majority opinion, it isn't there yet. What the ruling does, at least as I read it, is to resolve a long-troublesome conflict between two worthy principles: affirmative action and seniority.

What is the right thing to do when an employer who has recently hired minority workers pursuant to an affirmative action decree is subsequently forced by economic considerations to lay off some workers? Seniority, the normal (and frequently the contractual) basis for determining who gets laid off, seems a reasonable enough approach under ordinary circumstances. But seniority-based layoffs can result in wiping out the affirmative action gains. The minority workers hired to remedy the earlier discrimination naturally have less time on the job and are among the first to be laid off. The court resolved the conflict between the two principles in favor of seniority.

So where does Brad Reynolds find his vindication? Probably in the words of Justice Byron White, writing for the majority, who said Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act provided "make-whole relief only to those who have been actual victims of illegal discrimination"—in other words, not to members of discriminated-against minority groups, but only to those who can show that they are themselves victims of discrimination. But White was talking not about affirmative action hiring but only about awards of competitive seniority. His reference was to an earlier case, in which blacks who had unlawfully been refused when they applied for jobs as over-the-road drivers and who were later hired under a court order were awarded seniority dating back to the time of their original application. Newly hired blacks who could not prove that they had individually been discriminated against got no such award.

That distinction does not strike me as unreasonable. Reynolds, however, managed to read it as an "unequivocal" bar against racial quotas. "I said some time ago," he exulted, "that civil rights was at a crossroads; that we would either take the path of race-conscious remedies . . . or the high road of race neutrality. The court has moved us off the crossroads and propelled us down the road we have been urging. It is an exhilarating decision."

If Reynolds' statement involved nothing more than an over-broad reading of the court's ruling, then it might not be so bad. But he has taken his misreading of the decision as a mandate to reexamine all antidiscrimination settlements involving the government and to urge other government agencies to do the same. The result could be a reopening of 50 or more affirmative action agreements and a needless stalling of negotiations now in process.

The real problem with Tuesday's opinion is not what it said but what Brad Reynolds thinks it said. Reynolds is in position to do a good deal of harm before the court tells him he read it wrong.●

TRIBUTE TO BASIL PATERSON OF NEW YORK

HON. WILLIAM H. GRAY III

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, June 21, 1984

● Mr. GRAY. Mr. Speaker, on June 13, 1984, our distinguished colleague in the other body, Senator EDWARD M. KENNEDY, delivered a most poignant message honoring Basil Paterson of New York. The occasion was a testimonial dinner for Mr. Paterson, who has held the offices of State senator, deputy mayor, secretary of state, and vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee. Basil Paterson's outstanding career of public service has been dedicated to building bridges among all people, and the ending of discrimination against his own community. He truly deserves to be recognized in the public arena as a model of excellence.

Senator KENNEDY summarized Basil Paterson's accomplishments and achievements most eloquently and I commend this speech of tribute to you, Mr. Speaker, and all of my colleagues.

Address of Senator Edward M. Kennedy: Tribute to Basil Paterson, New York City, June 13, 1984

I am honored to be part of this tribute to Basil Paterson.

In every arena of public service, he has set the highest standard. He has been called "a man for all reasons"—and Basil Paterson proves the power of reason to overcome ignorance and anger. He matches that reason to principle—and Basil Paterson has never turned aside, in a time when the temptation seemed irresistible to many, from the poor, from those who work with their hands, from the victims of injustice and discrimination.

He was the first black man to be nominated for statewide office in New York—and Basil Paterson led the ticket in the primary, because his capacity and his character had a powerful appeal to people of every race.

State senator, deputy mayor, secretary of state in New York, and vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee—these are the milestones of a distinguished career—and I believe that for Basil Paterson, the greatest measure of public service is yet to come.

And this occasion is not only a tribute to him personally, but to the things for which he stands. In this country, now as much as ever before, we need to hear and to heed the meaning which is the message of his success—that we can prevail by speaking to the best instincts of people, to their hopes and not their fears; that there is a fundamental difference between the healthy democratic tradition of dividing the electorate on the basis of issues—and the dangerous, corrosive tactic of dividing Americans on the basis of race or religion, where they were born or how they live their private lives. The challenge for all of us in politics is greater than winning votes for ourselves or even for our programs. We are, most of all, custodians of the civility which alone permits us to live together in a society that is both pluralistic and free. Where there is suspicion, we must stand for tolerance. Where there is division, we must seek to heal. Where group is set against group, we must search out the common ground.

We must resist polarization politics—wherever it is practiced—whether it is in the present administration or in the present campaign.

At the center of power in Washington, we have now witnessed the rise of a new hostility toward racial justice; a new indifference toward the minority of our people who are not white; a new paternalism toward the majority who are women.

The President's political strategist write off the black vote—and his policymakers write black citizens out of their agenda of concern. But something more is at stake here than political calculus. Even if it was politically convenient, it was also morally wrong to give tax breaks to segregated schools. It was morally wrong to oppose the passage of a stronger Voting Rights Act. It was morally wrong to support Federal aid for colleges that discriminate against blacks and browns and women. It was morally wrong to take the most in budget cuts from the defenseless millions of Americans who have the least, while lavishing needless billions of dollars on the defense budget. It is indefensible for this administration to give aid and comfort to the apartheid regime in South Africa. And it is indefensible for the President of the United States to libel the memory of the Reverend Martin Luther King.

These policies are part of a pattern of dangerous dealing in group slander, ignorance and stereotypes. Why is the official who suggested that many Hispanics live in overcrowded conditions because of their culture still employed in this administration? Why is the official who said that children not be "compelled" to have an integrated education still employed in this administration? How could this administration possibly nominate to the Legal Services Corporation a man who could criticize an Hispanic judge as a "professional Mexican" and then offer the incredible defense—and I quote: "There are such things as professional blacks, professional Greeks, professional Dagos, professional Jews . . ." Those words are a disgrace; they are the badge of a professional bigot who should never serve in public office.

Perhaps such intolerance is tolerated because at the pinnacle of this administration, there is a President who himself has said that the people who sleep in the streets are "homeless by choice."

There is no place in America for a form of spiritual segregation in which a political coalition is so plainly labelled: "For whites only."

Polarization politics deprives people of their dignity—and denies opponents the integrity of their views. Increasingly, among the New Right allies of the President and within the administration itself, name-calling has become a substitute for rational debate. Advocates of the nuclear freeze are not "soft on communism." Those who oppose outlawing abortion are not "murderers." And a nominee for Attorney General should not be confirmed after he refers to the American Civil Liberties Union as "a criminals' lobby."

James Watt was not dismissed from office because he mis-stated the administration's attitude, but because he revealed it with a devastating clarity. That attitude is both plain and painful: People are thought of and treated as stereotypes—and the stereotypes can then be manipulated for political advantage.

But to be credible in confronting the present administration on the fundamental issue of civility, we must also be prepared to face and oppose incivility not just among our political opponents, but wherever we may find it.

We cannot pretend that we do not see or hear when Louis Farrakhan predicts race war by 1986—or implies that "Jewish editors and Jewish writers" distort the news—or threatens the life of a black reporter for doing his job—or refers to Hitler as "a very great man"—or shakes the hand of Colonel Qaddafi. Such conduct can never be condoned—and it must be unequivocally condemned.

My grandparents grew up in Boston with signs that said: "No Irish need apply." One of the most profound commitments of my life, and of my brothers' lives, has been to the cause of civil rights. President Kennedy was ready to risk his reelection for that cause. And now, as a matter of the most basic civil rights, we must clearly state that whatever the source or the excuse, anti-semitic stereotypes are as wrong as anti-black stereotypes.

Nor can we pretend that we do not see or hear when Meir Kahane forms "Jews Against Jackson"—or when opposition to official Israeli decision is equated with the shame of anti-Semitism. I strongly disagree with the Reverend Jackson on the issue of the Middle East—and I have always been and always will be among the strongest supporters of Israel. But his position on the Middle East is wrong in terms of policy—and it certainly is not a proof of prejudice.

How sad it is to have to state the obvious—that Jews are not anti-black—and blacks are not anti-semites. Indeed, for many generations, in many difficult days, they have been the closest of allies in the great struggle for racial justice.

Now, in this moment of tension, perhaps we should remember that terrible moment, on a sweltering summer night 20 years ago this month, when two Jewish students and one black student from this city were murdered in Mississippi because they were working side by side as brothers for the right to vote. Their names were James Chaney, Andrew Goodman, and Michael Schwerner—and their killers drew no distinctions between them. They were there to oppose hatred and intolerance, and they were killed because across the boundaries of race and religion, they were pushing back the walls of racism and repression. They were young men of different belief and different color, but they were united by a common bond of conscience.

For their sake and for our own, for the sake of all of us who have stood together for equality, we must now stand together against any attempt to sow new seeds of fear. Once again, we must overcome. In the words of Martin Luther King, we must judge one another as Americans by the content of our character and not the color of our skin." And if he were here today, I am certain he would add—And not by the way we worship God."

Every American must be part of the political process—not only in theory, but in reality. We must make room for the voiceless for whom Jesse Jackson has raised his voice. We can be proud that the first two black candidates for President—Jesse Jackson and Shirley Chisholm—both have run in the Democratic Party. And we must reaffirm as strongly as possible that there can be no barrier to a black citizen, a Jewish citizen, a woman or any other citizen becoming President or Vice-President of the United States.

In short, we must not permit polarization politics to set Jewish Americans against black Americans—and to deflect two great peoples from their historic dream of freedom from bondage and persecution. Both alike have sacrificed and suffered. Many Jewish voters and progressives—not out of self-interest, but out of conviction and idealism. Many blacks were beaten and too many were killed when they answered the call to fight for their rights not with bullets and bombs, but with faith and without violence. They gave of themselves to save others, even their oppressors.

Now we must learn from that history—so that we may live together—and, even more, so that we may restore the sense of hope, the call to challenge and to sacrifice. That call summons not only Jewish and black Americans but all Americans

As a country, we are—we must be—more than a collection of groups or a combination of competing regions. We cannot grasp new possibilities by continuing the petty practice of always calculating every decision on the basis of who will get what. The whole of America is greater than the sum of all its parts and interests. We are one Nation with one history and one destiny—and I am certain that Americans will respond, if we are asked to raise our sights from narrow and separate views to a broader vision of our future.

And the challenge before us requires more than waiting for that future to rescue us from the present and the past. If we demand new ideas, and we should, we do it in order to fulfill abiding ideals of liberty, or caring and compassion. A program may become obsolete; but we must not throw out the principle with the program.

As we seek to break the shackles of the past, we must also continue to draw upon its legacy; we must not free ourselves in order to run from responsibility for the poor and the neglected, the children who must be taught and the sick who must be treated. The failure of a policy must never be misused as an excuse for turning our back on injustice and pain—and looking out only for ourselves, our own constituency, our own race or ethnic group. There is nothing outmoded about the belief that the strong owe a duty to the weak; the privileged have an obligation to the powerless; and all of us must strive not only for ourselves, but for each other and for our country.

We know there are those waiting, even eager, to nurture antagonisms and shatter our unity. In the decisive struggle for the soul of America, we will be conquered only if we are divided.

In 1980, the Senator from this State, my brother Robert Kennedy, was a candidate for President. During that campaign, he once told a student group of the stark poverty of the inner cities, and a questioner asked who would have to sacrifice to change all this. And Robert Kennedy answered in two words: "You will."

No one was more open to the future than he was, more ready to brave its dangers, more committed to the quest. As his friend, Jack Newfield, said of him, he was born into a privileged world of affluence, patriotism and power—but he was loved most by America's dispossessed. For no one was more willing than he was to ask us as a people to give something back in return for what has been given to us.

We must answer that challenge now, each of us in our own hearts and all of us for our country. In the months and years ahead, in the fact of all the tensions and any temptation to turn against one another, let us recall the words of Robert Kennedy on the night when Martin Luther King was shot:

"We can move . . . as a country in great polarization or we can make an effort to comprehend and understand. What we need in the United States is not division; what we need is not hated; but love and wisdom and compassion toward one another, and a feeling of justice toward those who still suffer within our country, whether they be white or whether they be black."

Let us, as he finally said, standing in the cold wind of that bitter night, seek in our own time "to tame the savageness of man and make gentle the life of the world."

Let us in our time, in this city and this country, "dedicate ourselves to that"—so that we shall march forward again, as we have before, hand in hand, a land indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.●

WASHINGTON REPORT

HON. DONALD J. PEASE

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, June 21, 1984

● Mr. PEASE. Mr. Speaker, when temperatures here in Washington soared into the nineties last week, Members of Congress knew that summer had arrived.

Relatively few citizens are aware of how the congressional calendar reckons the passing of time, and I took advantage of last week's heat wave as a hook upon which to hang an explanation of the calendar in my weekly newspaper column. It follows:

WASHINGTON REPORT

With Washington, DC temperatures in the 90s last week and humidity levels to match, U.S. congressmen knew that summer had arrived.

Even without the hot, muggy weather for which Washington is famous, the arrival of summer would have been obvious to members of Congress. For the second week in a row, we were putting in a succession of 12- to 14-hour workdays.

As surely as the weather, legislative activity marks the seasons in the nation's capital.

The first six weeks of the year are slow-paced, as Congress gets itself organized and receives messages outlining the president's legislative and budgetary agendas.

By mid-February, action on the floor of the House of Representatives is still slow, but committee hearings—which generate later floor activity—are in full swing.

February also signals the start of a four-month round of visits to Washington by organizations seeking to inform Congress of their views on pending legislation.

This is the essence of the representative nature of our form of government. Each organization brings its members from around the nation, briefs them on issues important to the membership, and sends them off for appointments with their own congressmen. Invariably, each organization also holds a "congressional" breakfast, luncheon, reception or dinner to which congressmen are invited.

So, while the House does not sit for long hours in formal session, congressmen run all day from breakfast (often two or three in one day) to committee meetings to luncheons to constituent appointments to receptions (four in an evening would not be unusual) to dinners.

With March come the first flowers and the start of a three-month period of Washington tours by school children. Photographs with congressmen on the steps of the Capitol are a popular feature of those tours.

Once Memorial Day has passed, the school groups taper off and so do the citizen lobbying visits and the breakfasts, luncheons, receptions and dinners. In their place, congressmen begin to see casually dressed vacationing families who just stop by the office to say hello and pick up tickets to the House and Senate galleries.

June also brings out of committees a flood of "bills" ready for House floor consideration along with the realization that not much time remains in the legislative year.

That means late night sessions for the rest of the summer (except for recess periods) and into September.

Summer also means conference committees. When legislation passes the House and Senate in different forms, the task of ironing out (i.e., compromising) the differences falls to joint House-Senate conference committees. For major bills, the job can be arduous, time-consuming, frustrating and sometimes contentious.

Fall produces early adjournment in election years (so congressmen can turn their attention to campaigning) and, in non-election years, slogging away at unfinished legislative business. There isn't much joy in Washington, DC if Congress is in session during November and December.

And that's how the congressional calendar reckons the passing of time. If the weather has turned hot and the sessions have turned long, this must be June.●

NEW POLICY ON ARMS CONTROL

HON. JIM COURTER

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, June 21, 1984

● Mr. COURTER. Mr. Speaker, the congressional arms control debate has reached the point where it is necessary to restate the obvious: that arms control only serves the interest of American and world security when it induces bilateral restraint and compliance with agreements.

The sad facts of recent arms control history are that U.S. reductions have not been met by Soviet restraint, and U.S. compliance with negotiated agreements has not been reciprocated by Soviet compliance.

A consistent pattern of Soviet violations has been revealed by the President's January 23, 1984, report to Congress, and by the secret November 1983 report of the President's General Advisory Committee on Arms Control and Disarmament, which gives a detailed description of the Soviet compliance record over the 1958-83 period.

Perhaps the most serious of these violations, because of its destabilizing potential, is the development of an incipient Soviet ABM system, which is indicated by Soviet missile and radar capabilities, including the Krasnoyarsk radar cited in the President's January 23 report. Also of grave concern are Soviet actions which thwart the verification process. This includes the encryption of missile telemetry and a newly revealed violation: jamming of our electronic intelligence monitoring satellites, which denies us the ability to receive even the highly encoded flight test data that are transmitted during Soviet missile tests. This fact was confirmed by Assistant Secretary of Defense Perle before the House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday.

These violations are in addition to known violations of agreements on the use, development and deployment of weapons, including the cases of the SS-16 missile, the SS-X-25 missile, and biological weapons, to name three items described in the January report of the President.

The American people have a strong desire for peace and international stability, and they support arms control as a means of achieving these goals. However, this attitude does not imply approval of a unilateral arms control process in which the Soviets break their commitments with impunity.

Congress needs to acknowledge the fact of Soviet violations of arms control agreements, deplore their grave implications, and begin to develop an appropriate policy response.

The resolution I introduce today is an attempt to begin that process. Its central purpose is to state the principle that arms control can only serve American security when both sides comply with agreements, and that the defense of the United States should not be constrained by agreements which are not observed by the Soviet Union.

To acknowledge Soviet violations and reinforce the principle of reciprocity does not signal the end of arms control. Rather, it points to the need to deny the Soviet Union the ability to use arms control as an instrument of unilateral advantage. Any military advantage acquired by the Soviet Union through violations of agreements should be removed, either through negotiated Soviet corrective actions or through U.S. defense efforts.

If any development will bring the demise of arms control, it will be the Soviet pattern of treaty violations and an American reluctance to respond. For this reason, I introduce this resolution today—a resolution which I believe contains the elements of an appropriate policy response.

It is my hope that this resolution will further the arms control debate and earn the support of my colleagues.

H. Con. Res. —

Whereas the principal task of the United States Government is the defense of the Nation;

Whereas national security can be provided by military defense and arms control agreements which limit the development, numbers, capability, or use of weapons;

Whereas arms control agreements serve United States security interests only to the extent to which their terms are properly observed by all parties to these agreements;

Whereas the President reported to the Congress on January 23, 1984, that the Soviet Union has committed seven violations or probable violations of arms control agreements;

Whereas the President is reviewing, and the public press has reported, reports of numerous additional Soviet violations of arms control agreements;

Whereas the Soviet Union's violations of arms control agreements display a lack of the good faith required for effective arms control;

Whereas certain actions of the Soviet Union which violate arms control agreements have a military significance and an adverse impact on United States security interests;

Whereas the Soviet radar at Krasnoyarsk, by its type, size, location, and orientation, is capable of ballistic missile defense functions, and appears to be part of an incipient anti-ballistic missile system including Soviet missiles and other radars;

Whereas the Krasnoyarsk radar has been cited by the President as "almost certainly" in violation of the 1972 Treaty on the Limitation of Anti-Ballistic Missile Systems;

Whereas the activation of a Soviet anti-ballistic missile system would alter the strategic balance by reducing the ability of United States nuclear missiles to reach targets in the Soviet Union;

Whereas a Soviet anti-ballistic missile system, when coupled with the Soviet Union's offensive nuclear arsenal, would have a destabilizing effect by giving the Soviet Union reason to believe that it could successfully mount a "first strike" nuclear attack against the United States; and

Whereas Soviet actions which violate the Treaty on the Limitation of Anti-Ballistic Missile Systems and other agreements are destructive of stable relations and trust between the United States and the Soviet Union: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That—

(1) the Congress deplores the Soviet Union's violations of arms control agreements concerning nuclear, conventional, chemical, and biological weapons;

(2) the Congress urges that correction of Soviet violations of arms control agreements be accorded the highest priority in negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union;

(3) it is the sense of the Congress that where Soviet violations of arms control agreements are not corrected, the United States should assess the military significance of such violations, and take such actions as may be necessary to deny the Soviet Union any military advantage it may have derived from its violations of arms control agreements;

(4) it is the sense of the Congress that the defense of the United States should not be constrained by adherence to arms control agreements or portions of arms control agreements which are violated by the Soviet Union; and

(5) the Congress supports the negotiation of new arms control agreements with the Soviet Union, provided compliance with these agreements may be verified with an extremely high degree of confidence and provided the United States is satisfied that any military imbalance resulting from Soviet violations of arms control agreements has been removed, through Soviet or United States actions.●

THIRD CONGRESSIONAL ART EXHIBIT

HON. THOMAS J. DOWNEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, June 21, 1984

● Mr. DOWNEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, on Wednesday, June 27, the Arts Caucus will be proud to open the third congressional art exhibition in the Cannon Tunnel. This major exhibit, with more than 200 works by high school students from across the country, is the largest ever since the competition began in 1981. I would like to congratulate my 215 colleagues who conducted local competitions.

This annual event proves to be a rewarding experience for every Member who participates. It has given them the opportunity to bring together their local business, cultural, and educational communities in this special effort to encourage the creative spirit of today's youth.

Mr. Speaker, the following article captures much of the excitement and interest generated by the many district contests held during the past year:

[From the Miami Herald, June 3, 1984]

LEHMAN CAPITALIZES ON STUDENTS' ARTWORK

(By Ellen Livingston)

Last year, when the first U.S. Congressional Art Competition for high school students was announced, Rep. William Lehman, D-North Dade, didn't get involved. "It seemed like a lot of trouble," he said.

But when the winning entries began to arrive in Washington and Lehman saw the halls of the Capitol transformed into an art gallery, he was inspired.

"I said, 'Next year, by golly, we're going to have North Dade up here, because this is very impressive,' " he said.

Lehman was so impressed, in fact, that he was scheduled to fly to North Miami Saturday to announce the district's winner in this year's competition. He's even throwing in a round-trip ticket to the nation's capital so the budding artist may see her work on display.

The only problem is that the winner, North Miami Beach High senior Sandra Cifuentes, couldn't attend Saturday's ceremony at the North Miami Museum and Art Center because she was out of town. A Lehman spokesman said Cifuentes and other North Miami Beach art students were on a school trip—to Washington.

Cifuentes' winning entry, a pencil drawing titled Fort Lauderdale Weekend will hang in the U.S. Capital for the next year. Three honorable mentions will have their works on display in Lehman's Washington, North Dade and Miami offices.

Those winners are American High sophomore Marva Williams for a pen line drawing titled Fantasy Tree; Carol City High senior Israel Martinez for an acrylic on canvas titled School Daze; and North Miami Beach student Marcos Sinconegul for a watercolor called On Location. All were selected by a four-member panel from 25 entries.

Lehman said he was throwing in the winner's free trip to Washington as an encouragement to other artists.

"I think it might stimulate more interest next year," he said. "Artists have to live, too. You have to give them some kind of material recognition of their accomplishment. For that person to see what their contemporaries are doing throughout the country would broaden their perspective."●

EARLY PROJECTIONS: FACTS WITH SOURCES MORE BELIEVABLE

HON. AL SWIFT

OF WASHINGTON

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, June 21, 1984

● Mr. SWIFT. Mr. Speaker, throughout the course of the lengthy public debate on the subject of early projections of election results by the television networks, the networks have pointed proudly to the high level of accuracy of their projections.

Although the accuracy of the projections is, at best, irrelevant to the debate over early projections, it is generally the case that they are highly accurate. One way that level of accuracy is achieved, however, is that the networks simply keep adjusting their projections until they get them right.

At this point in the Record, Mr. Speaker, I would like to insert an editorial from the Port Angeles Daily News, which describes one instance of how this process worked during the caucuses in Washington State.

[From the Port Angeles (WA) Daily News, Mar. 22, 1984]

Reporting a breaking news story quickly and accurately is one of the tough assignments in the news business. That is because getting a clear grasp of the facts is essential in putting together an accurate story, and time pressure makes that a much tougher job.

There is also the lurking terror of making a mistake. Mistakes raise questions in readers' minds about the accuracy of the rest of the story. A serious mistake is usually enough to keep a reporter tossing and turning through a good part of the night.

So we are hoping that there might be a few folks at NBC News who had some trouble getting to sleep after the recent state caucuses.

It was newscaster Tom Brokaw who came on about 10 p.m. that night to declare that Walter Mondale would be racking up a win in Washington.

Later he took it back, saying there had been a surge of delegates for Hart.

Never did Brokaw nor anyone else explain how the network had come up with either the first or second explanation of what was going on in the great state of Washington. That was the most troubling aspect of the whole thing.

When Brokaw made his first announcement that Mondale was winning, some caucuses were still meeting. Few results had been phoned in. Both Hart and Mondale volunteers were undoubtedly calling the networks to say their candidates were clearly ahead.

So what information did the network use to come up with a story on deadline?

We do not know.

With all of the hullabaloo about the impact of projections and estimates on election results, NBC should be more careful in double-checking its facts on deadline.

The network should also let viewers know where those facts come from.●

CUBAN AND HAITIAN REFUGEES FINALLY RECEIVE JUSTICE

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, June 21, 1984

● Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, while I was one of those who voted against the immigration bill yesterday on final passage, I must acknowledge that amendment 62, which granted permanent residence to Cuban and Haitian nationals, is a great victory for thousands of these refugees who have remained in limbo for several years. The adoption of this amendment to the immigration bill by voice vote indicates the strong bipartisan support which exists for resolving this issue. Credit must of course be given to the tremendous efforts of the National Coalition for Haitian Refugees and its executive director, Michael S. Hopper. Certainly without his tremendous commitment to the issue, the status of these refugees might still be unresolved.

The religious community has also played a key role in calling for a solution to the plight of Cubans from the Mariel exodus and Haitians who arrived during the same period of time. Church World Service, of the National Council of Churches, outlined their support for the bill in a letter to the House last week. Because of their longstanding support for Haitian refugees, I would like to include this letter in the Record for my colleagues' review. The letter follows:

Dear Representative: An important piece of legislation before the House of Representatives this session is the Cuban-Haitian Adjustment Act of 1984 (H.R. 4853), introduced earlier this year by Judiciary Committee Chairman Peter W. Rodino, Jr. and now being offered as an amendment to H.R. 1510. The bill represents a humane and just approach to the plight of Cuban and Haitian refugees in this country. We, as national religious leaders, request your support of this measure.

The measure would provide permanent resident status to a restricted class of Cuban and Haitian boat people who arrived in the United States between early 1980 and January 1, 1982. This group encompasses some 125,000 Cubans and 31,000 Haitians. It is composed of most of the Cubans and Haitians who arrived in the 1980 boatlift, individuals who were given an ad hoc "entrant" status, as well as a small group of Cubans and Haitians arriving after that program.

Our various denominations have a demonstrated history of concern for the protection and care of refugees needing haven from the conditions in their homelands. Many of us have ministered to the Cubans since the late 1950s and the Haitians since the early 1970s, attempting to meet not only their physical and emotional needs, but also endeavoring to ensure fairness and due process in their efforts to gain status in this country.

The story of our government's treatment of Cubans and Haitians in the past few years is a sad one, one which religious organizations have criticized. Not only have these refugees been left in an undefined status for the past four years, but also many who arrived subsequent to the 1980 "entrant" program, particularly the Haitians, were incarcerated for up to eighteen months while seeking status. Their release was gained only by federal court order.

Chairman Rodino's amendment is a thoughtful and appropriate response to the Cuban and Haitian plight. Again, we request your support of it.

Thank you for your consideration of our views.

Sincerely,

Bishop Philip R. Cousin, President, National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., Bishop of the Ninth Episcopal District, African Methodist Episcopal Church.

The Most Reverend John M. Allin, Presiding Bishop, The Episcopal Church, USA, The Presiding Bishops Fund for World Relief.

Reverend Dr. James R. Crumley, Jr., Bishop, Lutheran Church in America.

Reverend Dr. William H. Kohn, President, The Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Friday, June 22, 1984

The House met at 10 a.m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. WRIGHT].

The Chaplain, Rev. James David Ford, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Teach us, O gracious God, among all the other values that we ought to know, the gift of listening. May we hear more clearly Your still small voice beckoning us to the high road of truth, honesty, and justice. Teach us also to listen more compassionately to each other, hearing not only the words spoken, but the feelings and emotions that touch the human soul. Always, O God, may we listen, not only with our ears and minds, but also with our hearts, that we will truly be the people You would have us be. Amen.

COMPUTER CRIME BILL IS NECESSARY

(Mr. HUGHES asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, there was a disturbing news report last night that a group of computer buffs, using home terminals, improperly gained access to one of the world's largest confidential data files—the TRW Information Services credit bureau.

According to the report, any number of computer hackers obtained the password needed to enter the system, and routinely gained access to highly confidential and sensitive credit information affecting some 90 million people.

As dramatic as this incident appears, it is hardly an isolated incident. Computer crime is now one of the fastest growing crime epidemics in our country. Since 1980 alone, the number of such incidents has risen by 500 percent, and the average cost of these break-ins is one-half million dollars.

Mr. Speaker, it's time we recognized that computer hackers who intrude into data banks are not just mischievous kids looking for fun. They are engaging in illegal activities which pose potentially serious threats to society.

Can you imagine the harm that could be done to our national security if they gained access to our classified files at the Pentagon?

The House Subcommittee on Crime has recently approved legislation which would establish stiff criminal penalties for those persons who gain illegal access to computer banks.

I believe that, this is one of the most important crimefighting bills now under consideration in the Congress. It is my hope that the House and Senate will move rapidly to enact this legislation, so that our law enforcement community will have additional tools to respond to this high-technology crime problem.

FEDERAL LAW NEEDED TO PROTECT AGAINST COMPUTER CRIMES

(Mr. NELSON of Florida asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Well, here we have another example of computer crime on the front page of the morning's paper: "Computer Raiders Hit Big Credit File." By using home computers, those culprits invaded the privacy of 90 million Americans by getting the access codes, the passwords, and obtaining confidential information.

Crimes committed with the use of computers are occurring every day. Just imagine, as the chairman of the Crime Subcommittee [Mr. HUGHES] of New Jersey has said, what wound happen if criminals accessed Federal computers? You don't have to imagine because it happened a year ago in the Langevin case when a former employee of the Federal Reserve Board accessed the Federal Reserve's computer information on the money supply—information worth millions.

Imagine also what would happen, since we transfer billions of dollars in our financial system daily by computer, both nationally and internationally, if someone used their computer for criminal purposes?

Clearly the Federal Government should set the national standard. We need a Federal law protecting against computer crime.

I urge the House and the Senate to support such legislation that will be soon forthcoming from the Subcommittee on Crime chaired by the gentleman from New Jersey.

DOD AUTHORIZATION BILL FOR FISCAL YEAR 1985

(Mr. LEVINE of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LEVINE of California. Mr. Speaker, earlier this week the other body passed its version of the fiscal year 1985 DOD authorization bill. It contains language on the important new warranty law with holes big enough to drive an M-1 tank through.

First, the new language exempts weapons costing less than $100,000 or whose total procurement cost is less than $10 million.

Second, that language would exempt from the warranty requirement the first year, or the first 10 percent, of the production run of the weapons system, whichever is less.

Third, the bill and the report language which accompanies it gives the Defense Department sweeping authority to exempt from the warranty requirement any aspect of a weapons performance the Pentagon labels "nonessential." There was never any intent on the part of Congress to give the Pentagon such power when the warranty law was written.

Since the warranty law was enacted last year, Mr. Speaker, the administration has sought on all fronts to repeal it or weaken it. The Secretary of Defense has already exempted what could amount to as much as 30 percent of the contracts signed by the Department of Defense from the warranty law.

Mr. Speaker, the integrity of the warranty law is now at stake. I urge the House conferees to ensure a strong and meaningful defense warranty law by rejecting the other body's amendments.

SECRETARY OF LABOR NEEDS TO COOPERATE WITH HOUSE ON YOUTH UNEMPLOYMENT

(Mr. HAWKINS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HAWKINS. Mr. Speaker, with a crisis in youth unemployment exploding this summer, the Subcommittee on Employment Opportunities has invited Secretary of Labor Donovan to testify on the development of a bipartisan solution. Regretfully, although scheduled, he has refused to appear.

Instead, while ignoring mandates under current law, he has devoted his time to calling for a subminimum wage, 85¢ less than a minimum wage, whose real value today is worth less than the 1963 minimum of $1.25 and which would substitute youth employment for adults: a scheme, untargeted, unmanageable, and discredited by numerous objective studies, including those of the Labor Department.

If the Secretary is sincere, he already has some roads which remain unused. For example, the targeted Jobs Tax Credit and the regular summer jobs program under JTPA. Also, there remains the $100 million supplemental now buried in the other body that would—if the administration would remove its opposition—provide 100,000 jobs immediately and show good faith. Other legislation to create youth incentive jobs tied to education and training is also available and awaiting the administration's assurance of support.

Therefore, if the Department of Labor is sincere in wanting to help our youth this summer and beyond instead of providing windfall profits to the fast food chains who stand to make millions on his subminimum wage—the Secretary should at least be willing to open dialog with both Houses of Congress openly and in good faith.

IN TRIBUTE TO "THE LAWMAKERS"

(Mr. MINETA asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MINETA. Mr. Speaker, for several years now the Congress and the legislative process has been the subject of a PBS weekly television program, "The Lawmakers."

This fine program has provided excellent coverage of our debates and decisions, coverage which is vital if the American public is to understand and participate in the workings of their Government.

As some Members have heard, this fine show will soon be going off the air. I regret that we will no longer have the benefit of "The Lawmaker's" wit and its wisdom.

Paul Duke, Linda Wertheimer, and Cokie Roberts, the three principal reporters on the show, along with the other staff, have made a great contribution to expanding public knowledge and interest in what we do here, and they shall be missed.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT TO BALANCE THE FEDERAL BUDGET

(Mr. DANNEMEYER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, just a few moments ago, we heard two colleagues on the Democratic side talk about the necessity of adopting a law today at the Federal level that will, hopefully, preclude computer crime. I think that is sound; we should do that. The reason is that the computer technology should not be used by those who seek to steal from those who are alive today.

I would like to ask my colleagues, however, to also address the same concern to the next generation, from whom we are stealing right now, in our refusal to adopt a balanced budget amendment to the Federal Constitution. The conduit for that theft is the Congress of the United States and we can restrain that interrelationship between Congress and the next generation, who are not here to speak for themselves, by signing Discharge Petition 10 at the desk so that we will at least have a chance to vote on that proposed constitutional amendment which will bring some fiscal discipline to the Congress of the United States.

EFFORT TO CUT FEDERAL SPENDING

(Mr. LUNGREN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LUNGREN. Mr. Speaker, yesterday, my colleague from California [Mr. Coelho] lambasted Republicans for talking about the need to cut spending. He said that in typical Republican fashion, they used distorted information to demand a bogus amendment to balance the budget they have bloated. He indicated that many Republicans have Federal spending in their areas, and he ended his statement by saying, "I trust these gentleman will soon have a special order calling for cuts in this spending as well, unless their motto is 'Do not cut mine, but cut someone else's.'"

Well, Mr. Speaker, yesterday I offered an amendment on the floor to cut something in my district. I was trying to bring to the attention of my colleagues $20 million in the bill that was then before us being put into the construction phase of a building in my district which I have been informed by GSA cannot be spent because they will never get into construction phase.

I pleaded with my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to support me in saving $20 million of the Federal deficit by not spending it in my district. I was astonished yesterday to find out so many Democrats, unfortunately, would not assist me in that.

Mr. Coelho, who yesterday lambasted Republicans for not taking out special orders saying, "Cut something in my district, cut something in someone else's district," could not support me in this worthy effort.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that some people can remember from the beginning of the day to the end of the day what it is they said, so that they might vote in accordance with what they said. Particularly when they use it to attack Members of my side of the aisle.

Mr. COELHO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LUNGREN. I will be happy to yield to my friend from California.

Mr. COELHO. I would just like to know when the gentleman said that Democrats did not support your amendment. As I remember on the amendment, that there were quite a few Republicans who did not support it.

Is that true?

Mr. LUNGREN. That is true. A majority of Republicans supported it.

Mr. COELHO. That might tell you something.

Mr. LUNGREN. A majority of Republicans supported it. The gentleman, yesterday, asked Republicans to show where they could cut spending in their district; I took the gentleman's statement to heart, and I offered the gentleman an opportunity, and the gentleman could not support me.

There is nothing more I can do to help the gentleman.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION AUTHORIZATION ACT, 1985

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 529 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. Res. 529

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 1(b) of rule XXIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5604) to authorize certain construction at military installations for fiscal year 1985, and for other purposes, and the first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. All points of order against the consideration of the bill for failure to comply with the provisions of section 402(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 (Public Law 93-344) are hereby waived, and all points of order against the bill for failure to comply with the provisions of clause 5(a) of rule XXI are hereby waived. After general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed one hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Armed Services, the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule by titles instead of by sections, and each title shall be considered as having been read. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Hall] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Quillen] for purposes of debate only, pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 529 is an open rule providing for the consideration of H.R. 5604, the Military Construction Authorization Act for Fiscal 1985.

The rule provides for 1 hour of general debate to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Armed Services.

In order to expedite consideration of H.R. 5604, the rule provides that the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule by titles instead of by sections, with each title considered as read. The rule also provides for one motion to recommit.

It should be noted that the rule waives a point of order against the bill under section 402(a) of the Congressional Budget Act. Section 402(a) provides that it shall not be in order to consider any bill which authorizes the enactment of new budget authority for a fiscal year unless that bill has been reported on or before May 15 preceding the beginning of such fiscal year.

Section 610 of H.R. 5604 authorizes the enactment of new budget authority for fiscal year 1984 in the amount of $30,000 to carry out a military construction project outside the United States at the Naval Station in Keflavik, Iceland. Since the bill was not reported by May 15, 1983, it violates section 402(a) of the Budget Act. It should be noted, however, that this project was included in the House-passed military construction authorization for fiscal year 1984. Nevertheless, the item was dropped in conference and now has been inserted in H.R. 5604. The overall authorization for fiscal year 1985 was in fact reported by the required deadline of May 15, 1984.

The rule further waives all points of order against the bill for failure to comply with the provisions of clause 5(a) of rule XXI. Clause 5(a) of rule XXI prohibits appropriations in a legislative bill. This waiver is necessary because certain sections of the bill contain provisions which might be considered to involve appropriations.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 5604 authorizes about $9.3 billion for fiscal year 1985 for construction activities at military facilities both in the United States and overseas. This amount is $1.2 billion below the requested level.

I am especially pleased that the measure authorizes $36.4 million in military construction projects at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base. Included in this total is an authorization of $5.4 million toward the construction costs of a $10.8 million addition to the U.S. Air Force Museum. The balance of the costs will be raised through private contributions in my district. The addition is needed to protect historic aircraft, now stored outside, which are deteriorating.

Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of any opposition to this open rule on H.R. 5604, and I would urge my colleagues to adopt it.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may use.

Mr. Speaker, the able gentleman from Ohio has explained the provisions of the rule, and I would like to remind the Members of the House that this is an open rule.

I know of no controversy whatsoever on the rule. The bill made in order by the rule provides a reduction of $1.2 billion from the $10.5 billion requested by the Department of Defense. I believe that even though the bill represents a 21-percent increase over last year that it is within the framework of the request of the administration, which supports the bill. There are certain provisions which can be worked out in conference after it passes the House.

This bill does provide funds for projects in my district. The Holston Ordnance Works in Kingsport, TN, receives funds, and next year the Department of the Army and the committee will be working on a major reconstruction project for Holston Ordnance.

The bill also contains authorization for a project in Elizabethton, TN, for a 200-person National Guard Armory.

Mr. Speaker, I urge adoption of the rule and the bill when it comes to the floor of the House.

Mr. McEWEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. QUILLEN. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. McEWEN. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the rule.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I have no requests for time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HOYER). Pursuant to House Resolution 529 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 5604.

□ 1045

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5604) to authorize certain construction at military installations for fiscal year 1985, and for other purposes, with Mr. GLICKMAN in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Purusant to the rule, the first reading of the bill is dispensed with.

Under the rule, the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KRAMER] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS].

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, today the Committee on Armed Services brings to the floor of the House, H.R. 5604, as amended, the fiscal year 1985 military construction authorization bill.

In presenting this legislation, I want to express my appreciation to the distinguished gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KRAMER], the ranking Republican member of the Subcommittee on Military Installations and Facilities, for his leadership and assistance during extensive hearings on this bill. Also, I take this time to thank each of the members of the subcommittee for their diligent work on this bill, particularly at a time when we face severe budgetary constraints.

Overall, the committee believes that H.R. 5604, as amended, is a good bill. It represents a balanced effort to meet both the fiscal constraints that face us and to respond to the most pressing construction requirements of the military services.

For the Members' benefit, I want to briefly review the development of this legislation, Mr. Chairman.

The purpose of the bill is to provide new military construction authorization and related authority in support of the military departments, defense agencies, and Guard and Reserve Forces. Its enactment is necessary before appropriations can be provided to finance these activities.

The Department of Defense [DOD] originally requested new authority in the amount of $10.5 billion for fiscal year 1985. On May 8, by a 40 to 0 vote, the Committee on Armed Services approved H.R. 5604, as amended, providing for $9.3 billion in authorization for the new fiscal year. This amount is approximately $1.2 billion below the administration's budget request.

The committee also considered a fiscal year 1984 supplemental request submitted by the Department of Defense in the amount of $30 million to provide for construction of a fueling pier in Keflavik, Iceland. This project was previously approved by the House in the fiscal year 1984 military construction authorization bill but was lost in conference. Rather than reporting the supplemental request as a separate bill, the committee included a provision in H.R. 5604 amending the Fiscal Year 1984 Military Construction Authorization Act by $30 million. A waiver of section 402(a) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act was granted by the Rules Committee for the late reporting of this authorization.

Mr. Chairman, the full committee's action on H.R. 5604 followed extensive hearings and review by the Subcommittee on Military Installations and Facilities. Because of budgetary constraints dictated by House action on the first concurrent budget resolution, the committee adopted certain procedures, as outlined in the committee report, for reducing the budget request. These procedures resulted in a number of reductions being made and some projects being deferred that may otherwise have been considered valid requirements.

As a result of these actions, the committee was able to reduce the $10.5 billion request by $1.5 billion. At the same time, because of their relative priority in terms of contributing to readiness, morale, and operational capabilities, projects totaling approximately $253 million were added back to the bill. In taking this action, the committee also took into consideration the current favorable bidding climate, lower inflation rates, and the serious unemployment conditions that continue to exist in the construction industry. Thus, with the projects added back, the final reduction in the administration's request totals $1.2 billion, the figure that I previously alluded to.

In the interest of time, I will not detail the individual actions taken by the committee. For your convenience, However, I have included in my statement a summary of those actions which are more fully explained in the committee report.

ADMINISTRATION REQUEST AND COMMITTEE ACTION AS REFLECTED IN H.R. 5604, AS AMENDED

[In thousands of dollars]

	DOD fiscal year 1985 request	Changes by committee	Total amount approved by committee
Army	$3,687,174	$553,700	$3,133,474
Navy	2,509,086	194,528	2,314,558
Air Force	3,136,742	358,929	2,777,813
Defense agencies	478,300	115,252	363,048
NATO infrastructure	296,700	46,700	250,000
Guard and Reserve Forces	389,800	-37,492	427,292
Total	10,499,802	1,231,117	9,268,685

Briefly, I will highlight some of the major adjustments made by the committee:

A $96.2 million reduction in the ground launched cruise missile [GLCM] program. The decrease reflects the committee's action to defer $44 million for supporting facilities in The Netherlands until the country-to-country agreement has been finalized. In addition, it was determined that $52.2 million for facilities in support of accompanied tours at Florennes, Belgium could be deferred for 1 year.

In view of the recent decision by the Dutch Parliament to defer a final decision on deployment of GLCM until November 1985, I intend to offer an amendment at the appropriate time to defer the $35 million included in the bill for GLCM construction in the The Netherlands.

A $77-million reduction in the request for Rapid Deployment Force facilities. The committee deferred projects totaling $62 million at a classified location until negotiations regarding implementing agreements have been finalized. In addition, the committee deleted $15.1 million for six hardened aircraft shelters in Oman because of questions concerning the requirement.

An $8.7-million reduction for facilities in Honduras. The committee deferred these projects pending receipt of a congressionally mandated report on the regional master plan for construction in Central America.

A $142 million reduction for the Navy's share of the Santa Margarita water project at Camp Pendleton, CA. The committee deferred the Navy's share of the proposed $263 million water reclamation project pending independent action by the Interior Committee on legislation to authorize the two-dam project.

A $46.7 million reduction in the NATO infrastructure program. The committee action reflects the present strength of the dollar against NATO currencies. And,

A general reduction of approximately $374 million which reflects savings in the fiscal year 1984 and prior year military construction programs. These savings resulted from lower inflation rates and the excellent bidding climate.

In the general provisions, the committee approved the following major items:

A provision prohibiting the use of Department of Defense installations for the storage or disposal of nondefense toxic and hazardous materials;

A provision extending the family housing leasing and rental guarantee program to authorize the secretaries of each of the military departments to enter into one additional leasing and rental guarantee agreement at one location to accommodate a major restationing action; and

Three fair and equal market value land conveyances and one land exchange.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, the committee believes this is a good bill that deserves favorable consideration by the House.

Mr. Chairman, I wish to announce to my colleagues that at the appropriate time I intend to make a unanimous consent request that the bill be considered as read and open to amendment at any point. As presented, the rule states that the bill will be read by titles, and my thought is that is we opened the bill to amendment at any point, it would expedite the proceedings this morning, and my purpose is also to make it as convenient as possible for Members to offer their amendments, particularly those amendments that require the simultaneous amending of two titles.

Now that I have made the statement reporting the bill to the Committee, Mr. Chairman, I would like to beg the indulgence of the Chair and the Members of the Committee to make one final comment. As I said last year in the debate, for nearly 14 years now I have marched into the well of the House to stand in diametric opposition to the priorities established in our military budget. Last year my colleagues saw fit to bestow upon this gentleman the institutional responsibility to serve as the subcommittee chairperson of the Subcommittee on Military Installations and Facilities having the jurisdiction to report this military construction budget to the floor of Congress.

A number of my colleagues have said, "Now that the gentleman from California is the Chair of the subcommittee, does that mean now that the military construction budget [illegible] a good enough budget for all of us to support?"

Well, I would like to make a comment, particularly to those Members who have followed this gentleman's leadership with respect to views on the military budget and to my colleagues who do not necessarily agree with this bill and who would like to hear the gentleman's arguments on the military budget. First, the reason why I think this particular bill is not necessarily very constroversial is because the fights have already been made by the time the military construction budget comes to the floor of Congress. This budget is driven by decisions that are made outside of the military construction budget.

Mr. Chairman, for example, if you choose to deploy the Pershing and cruise missiles in Europe, an action that this gentleman opposes, then you would necessarily take the appropriate action to provide the resources for the bed-down of that weapons system. If you choose to go forward with the procurement of the B-1 bomber, an action this gentleman opposes, then the military construction budget must by necessity reflect the resouces to bed-down the B-1 bomber. If you choose to deploy the MX missile, a decision this gentleman opposes, you must take the necessary action in the context of this legislation for it to go forward.

The point this gentleman is making is that the military construction budget reflects policy decisions that have been made prior to the time we act upon this legislation. The reason why I think this particular bill is not necessarily controversial, as I said, is because all of the fights have been made prior to the time that this bill comes to the floor.

So I think that I can say without fear of contradiction that this bill does indeed reflect the consensus of this body. I think that this bill reflects the consensus of this body in the most favorable light. All of the fights have been rendered.

How, then, does this gentleman respond to the bill? There are items in this bill that I think are very important, very beneficial, and very good. Irrespective of the debate, I think there are a number of items that will continue to go forward because of their humane, humanitarian qualities. There are indeed quality-of-life issues. But the fact remains that even though this legislation does indeed reflect the consensus of this body, this gentleman must at certain points step outside of his institutional responsibilities as the subcommittee Chair of this legislation required to dutifully report this bill to the floor and also be a participant in the debate that shapes the priorities. So in that context, I continue to stand outside the consensus.

I still believe we have a long way to go, Mr. Chairman, in order to shape the priorities in a much different fashion. I continue to believe that we place too great a premium and reliance on preparing for peace by preparing for war. This military construction budget in many ways is very benign, but if you couple this military construction budget with the overall Department of Defense authorization, it would simply be one facet of a much larger bill that reflects a priority that places much too great a premium on a rising military budget and a rising military capability rather than moving us in the direction of peaceful settlement, political solution, and negotiations that move us away from the brink of war and thermonuclear disaster and move in the direction of peace in the 21st century.

So in that regard, as subcommittee Chair, with my institutional responsibilities, I report a bill that I believe is a good piece of legislation because I believe it reflects the consensus of this body in very fair and equitable terms, but as a Member of his body and as a Representative of my constituency in the Eighth Congressional District in California, I continue to stand outside that consensus because I think we must continue to challenge. So for my colleagues who follow this gentleman's thoughts on this bill, I still must oppose it because there are still items in this bill that reflect the larger decisions that have been made outside this bill.

As I said, this bill is driven by other policy decisions. We cannot fight all these policy decisions on the military construction budget, as I said, because many of them are reflective, but it continues to reflect those items, and in that context I must continue to maintain the integrity of my responsibility to represent my constituency.

Mr. Chairman, I thank the Members and beg the indulgence of the committee to allow me to step outside my institutional responsibility to make that statement.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself so much time as I may require.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the fiscal year 1985 military construction authorization bill that is before the House today.

As the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] has explained, H.R. 5604 represents an effort by the Armed Services Committee to respond to the military services' most pressing construction needs and at the same time do it within the fiscal constraints that face us. This task was a difficult one and the gentleman from California is to be commended for his evenhandedness in chairing the hearings on this legislation.

Earlier the gentleman from California explained some of the major adjustments to the bill made by the committee. The Department of Defense [DOD] requested nearly $10.5 billion for fiscal year 1985 for military construction. When examining the request, we found that nearly half of the growth in the new request was due to the need for facilities to field major weapon systems procured by Congress in previous years. All of these systems require substantial facilities to be made operational. So, finding ways to reduce the request to a smaller rate of growth was complicated by the fact that previous procurements were driving the requirement for future facilities.

After a very careful review of the military construction request, the committee was able to reduce the request by $1.2 billion. The bill recommended by the committee provides the facilities needed for new weapon systems and allows many substandard structures built during World War II to be replaced, modern barracks and working spaces to be provided for our forces at home and overseas, and programs to comply with environmental laws and for conserving energy to be continued at an uninterrupted pace.

Although the committee has brought to the House a bill that entails a smaller total program than that requested by the administration, it preserves our defense readiness and in many instances improves our fighting capabilities. I urge that this bill be passed by the House.

Let me extend my compliments again to not only the chairman but to the staff for what I consider to be a job well done.

Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may require to the gentleman from California [Mr. LAGOMARSINO].

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 5604, the military construction authorization for fiscal year 1985, and to compliment the chairman, the ranking member, and the members of the committee and staff for their work in putting together this bill, which I regard as a responsible, needed and essential component of our defense policy.

The committee has done a good job of balancing the needs of our national defense and the concerns of the taxpayers. They have proposed savings where appropriate, and outlays where they are needed, coming in $1.2 billion dollars under the President's request.

I think we sometimes overlook the fact that the dollars authorized under this bill represent projects which contribute, not just to our national defense—although that is the essential point—but also to employment and the economic well-being of local communities throughout the Nation. There are perhaps 20,000 families in my own congressional district, for example, who depend for their livelihood directly on military installations in Ventura and Santa Barbara Counties. Tens of thousands more derive their livelihood indirectly from that same activity. These activities are vital not just to our national defense and space efforts, but to our local economy. In 1985, for example, the first launch of the space shuttle will occur from Vandenburg Air Force Base—at a facility which has been funded and built over the past 6 years from authorizations in previous military construction bills. I was honored to participate just last month in ceremonies marking the dedication of the shuttle launch pad. Two other bases, Navy bases, in the area will also contribute to the shuttle launches and recoveries. The residents of my district are proud to play a role in this important space program, which holds such great promise for the Nation and for the world.

I'm also greatful to the committee for including authorization in this bill for the donation of land to the city of Lompoc for the proposed Western Spaceport Museum and Science Center, which will document this momentous undertaking.

Mr. Chairman, I urge an aye vote for the bill.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Montgomery].

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this legislation, the military construction authorization bill.

It has been mentioned that while the dollar figure of $9.3 billion reflects an increase of nearly $2 billion from last year, it also reflects a reduction of $1.2 billion in the amount requested by the administration.

I believe this bill provides an appropriate level of growth for the Nation's military construction and family housing requirements. It reflects fiscal responsibility on the part of my colleagues that serve on the Armed Services Committee. At the same time, the bill meets the pressing needs of both the Active and Reserve components of the All Volunteer Force.

Mr. Chairman, the National Guard and Reserve forces continue to play an integral part in military operations around the world. Congress places a great deal of emphasis on these forces because they represent a very cost-effective means of insuring our country's security.

I am pleased to note that in this bill there is an increase for the Guard and Reserve of $37 million over the amount requested by the administration.

I would like to say in conclusion, Mr. Chairman, that I want to thank my chairman, as I am the ranking majority member on the Subcommittee on Installations and Facilities, to thank my chairman, the gentleman from California [Mr. Dellums] for the fine job that he has done in this bill and also to the ranking minority member, the gentleman from Colorado, Mr. Ken Kramer, and the rest of the subcommittee members.

We feel we have a good bill. It should be supported by the great majority of the Members of this House.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 7 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. Stenholm].

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of this bill this morning.

I would like to take a moment to congratulate Chairman Dellums on the very fine work he and the members of his committee have put into this bill. Whenever I have expressed an interest in the area of military construction, I have always found the chairman to be open, accessible, and extremely fair and I commend his handling of this subcommittee's legislation.

During consideration of amendments to this bill, I had planned to offer an amendment on behalf of Congressman Arlan Stangeland and myself that would have exempted military construction authorized by this bill for fiscal year 1985 from the provisions of the Davis-Bacon Act. To put in the budget-cutting teeth, such an amendment should have, we also had included a provision to cut the funds authorized in H.R. 5604 by $100 million.

As we all know, Mr. Chairman, everyone is in favor of reducing the monstrous Federal deficits that threaten our entire economy. And everyone wants to stop wasteful and unnecessary government spending. This amendment would help accomplish these goals by:

Reducing military spending authorized for fiscal year 1985 by $100 million;

Producing construction contracts that accurately reflect locally competitive, market-determined costs;

Specifically and exclusively tying these spending reductions to the cost savings realized from the Davis-Bacon exemption; and

Not cutting back any actual military programs or activities or reducing the amount or quality of goods and services procured by the military.

The Congresssional Budget Office estimates that the Davis-Bacon Act increases the costs of Federal construction by 3.7 percent. In a statement presented to the House Military Installations and Facilities Subcommitee last October, the Department of Defense estimated that Davis-Bacon adds 5 percent to Federal construction costs.

The General Accounting Office, the Department of Labor, a Carter administration interagency task force, the Grace Commission, and others have all estimated a similar or greater Davis-Bacon cost premium.

Clearly, the Davis-Bacon Act is a costly depression-era relic that has operated in recent years counter to most of its original purposes. It has applied since 1935 to all Federal construction contracts over $2,000, even to those for painting, decorating, and repairs.

Ostensibly, Davis-Bacon requires payment of a locally prevailing wage. In practice, it often mandates the highest ages in a given area. These artificially imposed costs are further compounded by additional administrative, compliance, and paperwork costs.

Davis-Bacon applies to the domestic construction included in H.R. 5604, as well as roughly 40 percent of military family housing support costs, or about 60 percent of the bill's total $9.3 billion. Applying CBO's more conservative 3.7 percent estimate of Davis-Bacon cost inflation, and assuming, as do DOL and DOD, that recently enacted DOL regulations will save about half that amount, there is still over $100 million to be saved by exempting military construction from Davis-Bacon. There is widespread evidence that more would actually be saved, but our amendment ensures that DOD's spending will be trimmed by at least $100 million in fiscal year 1985. Because savings would be highly varied from site to site, the allocation of these savings would be made administratively.

The time is far past for Congress to get serious about the deficit and about wasteful spending. There are no simple, easy answers to the deficit problem. Instead, we will face a long series of difficult decisions, many of them painful, some of them involving seemingly small amounts. But for those who are willing to face up to this challenge, and to begin grappling with these difficult decisions, as well as for those who are concerned about the rate of growth of defense spending, this amendment offers one significant step forward.

Mr. Chairman, I want to pause for one moment and reiterate that I commend Chairman Dellums for his work in handling this bill. He has been very hardworking and very receptive, and extremely fair, to input from all sides in the area of military construction.

Mr. Chairman, I had felt compelled to offer this amendment today but I will not. The Parliamentarian has expressed a concern in regard to whether it would be germane. We could have made an argument as to the germaneness, which we will not do today, and I believe the major reason that I will use for not making a fight today is the fact that I believe in the legislative process of the Congress. And I believe that this particular issue should be handled during the process or as a part of our legislative process.

Last year Congressman Arlan Stangeland and I introduced H.R. 3846 which now has 96 cosponsors. H.R. 3846 would significantly reform, notice I am saying reform, not repeal, the Davis-Bacon Act. This bill would have saved up to $100 billion a year Governmentwide and about $100 million in military construction alone.

We introduced this bill last August. We have asked for hearings but what has the response been? Zero. No hearings.

The Education and Labor Committee has had ample opportunity to examine legislation in this area so that it should not be necessary to look for possible amendments to bills like the one before us today. But that committee has refused to do so.

It is one thing to be given your day in court and to be told that the committee has held hearings, looked at the testimony, and voted down your legislation; it is another thing entirely to be told that you will get no hearings, no day in court, that the legislative process does not really work the way we teach our children in school that it should. And it does not work when some Members simply refuse to consider some bills.

Unfortunately, that even happens, as in this case, when a bill would make a constructive reform, would save the taxpayers money, would cut waste in the Government and would even create new job opportunities for many of our unemployed.

I think more and more of the American people are finding it hard to fathom why Congress acts the way it does. I sincerely hope, and can say to you today I have received some faint flicker of optimism and hope that hearings will be held so that before this particular bill is on the floor next year that I will not have to come back to the floor of the House and say that we have not received our due legislative process.

Many of us, national TV, magazines, Members of Congress have focused on cost overcharges in the military in regard to bolts, tool boxes, hammers, et cetera. It is my belief that savings by reforming Davis-Bacon will make those cost overruns, that we have had so much public attention drawn to, look like peanuts compared to the effect of this particular reform legislation.

Again I thank the chairman for his indulgence and say I will not offer my amendment today but I would hope that other Members of this body and the people back home will begin to ask those questions of us in the Congress as to why we do not do some of those things that people like the Grace Commission and others have suggested that we do.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I now yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Washington [Mr. DICKS].

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I would like to congratulate the Armed Services' Committee for their outstanding work on the military construction bill. In particular, I would like to commend Chairman DELLUMS and Congressman KRAMER and all of the other members of the Military Installations and Facilities Subcommittee for bringing this bill to the floor in such a timely manner.

I applaud the committee's decision to authorize funding for the new Madigan Army Medical Center at Fort Lewis, WA. The authorization for funding to build a new hospital will allow the Army to replace the existing facility that was originally constructed in 1943. Madigan, the last of the Army's cantonment design hospitals, consists of over 100 one-story buildings, which are spread over 75 acres. These buildings, that are connected by more than 1½ miles of corridors and ramps, make the treatment of patients a logistical nightmare.

Unfortunately, the current facility cannot provide adequate medical care that our servicemen deserve. Madigan Hospital has been cited for having numerous fire, safety, and health violations and stands to loose its accreditation if new construction isn't begun soon.

The new Madigan Hospital contained in this authorization bill will serve as a five-State regional medical center and will provide care in a number of specialities for military populations in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, and Alaska. Also, Madigan has been designed to serve as a major medical evacuation center for almost all Army operational plans. The hospital will provide the first-stop treatment center for numerous patients arriving in the continental United States.

I salute the committee's action that will allow the Army to construct a facility that will provide the medical care that our servicemen deserve.

Thank you.

Again I want to thank the distinguished chairman and the staff of this committee. This is a committee that works hard for the Congress and I want to applaud Chairman DELLUMS for the outstanding job he does, and Congressman KRAMER, who is one of the most knowledgeable men in the House on military construction matters.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask how much time is remaining to the gentleman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] has 4 minutes remaining and the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KRAMER] has 26 minutes remaining.

Does the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KRAMER] have any additional requests for time?

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS].

Mr. DELLUMS. I thank the gentleman very much, and I appreciate his yielding 5 additional minutes to me.

Mr. Chairman, I now would like to first apologize to my distinguished colleague, a member of the Armed Services Committee, for not recognizing the gentleman prior to recognizing the distinguished gentleman from Washington [Mr. DICKS].

I would like to yield to the gentleman at this time for the purpose of entering into a colloquy with the chairman.

Mr. SKELTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DELLUMS. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. SKELTON. I thank the chairman, I wish to engage in a colloquy with the gentleman from California, the chairman of the very important subcommittee on Military Installations and Facilities, Mr. DELLUMS, and I wish to discuss the amendment that I proposed and that you adopted in the subcommittee which is designed to prevent our military installations from becoming dumping grounds for hazardous and toxic wastes.

Mr. DELLUMS. I thank the gentleman very much.

Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to enter into a colloquy with my distinguished colleague from Missouri. The purpose of entering into this colloquy is to establish legislative history.

During the markup of the fiscal year 1985 military construction authorization bill the committee did indeed approve the amendment sponsored by my colleague from Missouri, Mr. SKELTON, that deals with the question of storing hazardous and toxic waste materials on military installations that are neither owned nor generated by the Department of Defense. At this time I would like to ask my distinguished colleague would he explain the implications of the legislation for the purposes of establishing a legislative history here on the floor of the Congress, and I yield to the gentleman for that purpose.

Mr. SKELTON. I thank the gentleman for the opportunity to explain this legislative history.

As the gentleman from California is aware, the citizens of my home State of Missouri have been involved in an ongoing crisis involving the proposed cleanup of dioxin sites, the most famous being that of Times Beach, MO.

Because of this serious dioxin problem several cleanup proposals have been made by various people to use our Nation's military installations as temporary and also as permanent disposal sites for non-Department of Defense hazardous and toxic wastes.

□ 1120

Should the military be forced to become our Nation's hazardous waste dump-site managers, eventually our defense installations will become Government operated and funded storage facilities for private industries' hazardous and toxic wastes. In my congressional district, Fort Leonard Wood Army Base was recently mentioned and as a possible site for the storage of dioxin contaminated soil.

Our military installations were designed and constructed to train soldiers to protect our Nation. Proposals such as storing non-Defense hazardous waste takes away from this mission. We need to provide our military personnel with secure and safe conditions under which to train and work. This amendment merely reiterates this point.

The Department of Defense concurs with me that these proposals to harbor non-Department of Defense toxic and hazardous wastes on defense facilities is contrary to the explicit purpose of our Nation's defense. Proponents of this disposal plan have little evidence to argue their position other than the fact that Department of Defense lands are fenced and secured. Key questions on the appropriateness of the use of this land has been overlooked. Not normally addressed in the hazardous waste proposals are: Consideration of alternative disposal; preemption of competition with private sector sites; appropriateness of the environmental conditions of the Department of Defense installation; and indirect Federal subsidization of private sector generators hazardous waste disposal costs.

Although this amendment is already covered by a Department of Defense directive, by enacting it into law, the Defense Department's ability to deny inappropriate requests will be greatly strengthened. The Secretary of Defense would be given discretionary authority under emergency situations to make exception, under strict conditions, to protect the health and safety of the public from imminent danger. This amendment would send a clear signal that Department of Defense installations are not available as a last resort for non-Department of Defense hazardous waste generators. It may also cause hazardous waste generators to act more responsibly in handling their hazardous and toxic materials.

Mr. DELLUMS. So the gentleman from Missouri's amendment merely protects our installations from becoming Government-operated and supported toxic waste storage sites for industry except in certain situations where the Secretary of Defense would grant the appropriate exceptions; is that correct?

Mr. SKELTON. Yes, Mr. Chairman; that is correct. And I would also at this time wish to thank the gentleman from Florida [Mr. Hutto] for his excellent assistance with this amendment in subcommittee and a special commendation to the gentleman from California, the chairman of the Subcommittee, Mr. Dellums and to Mr. Kramer, the ranking minority member from Colorado, and to your subcommittee for the attention paid to this very important subject. It is important not just to Missouri, but to all of us in the Nation.

Mr. DELLUMS. I would like to thank the gentleman first, and second thank the gentleman for offering the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I too agree that we must protect our military trainees from unnecessary hazards when possible and I believe the gentleman's amendment will clearly signal to the industry that our military installations were not intended to be used for commercially generated hazardous waste disposal.

And my hope is that this colloquy is significant and important and will establish the appropriate legislative history in this respect.

I thank my distinguished colleague.

Mr. SKELTON. And I thank the chairman again for his excellent assistance in this regard.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, how much time do we have remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California [Mr. Dellums] has 3 minutes remaining.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I now yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Dyson].

Mr. DYSON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the bill and like all the other Members who spoke on the floor today, I salute my two colleagues on the Armed Services Committee, the chairman of the subcommittee, Mr. Dellums of California, ranking minority member, Mr. Kramer of Colorado.

I know we have given them a number of requests over the years; probably this year they were saturated with them. They did a good job in addition to meeting the required cuts, established by the full committee.

I salute each and every one of them and also the subcommittee's extraordinary staff.

Mr. Chairman, when I first came to the Congress in 1981, I was very fortunate to have been selected to serve on the House Armed Services Committee. As the Representative from Maryland's First Congressional District, I was very optimistic about the opportunity to voice the concerns of my constituents on one of our country's most important subjects—the national defense.

During the first few months in office, I would come to know something very important about this subject. Providing for the national defense meant much more than investing in modern weapons systems, such as Abrams M-1 tank, which is tested at the Aberdeen Proving Grounds, or the F-18 Navy fighter which is tested at Patuxent Naval Air Test Center. These weapons systems are critical to our national security, but, as many of us in both the House and Senate have learned over the last 4 years, taking care of our military personnel is equally important. This point became abundantly clear to me after visiting the military bases in the First District.

At the Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Gen. John J. Koehler, would frequently pull me to the side to say "we've got to do something about the housing problems at this base, Roy."

At APG very little had been done to replace, much less improve, the barracks or family housing throughout the 1970's. Some of these facilities dated back to the early part of the century when the installation was first established.

I heard the same concerns expressed to me at Patuxent Naval Air Test Center, where the able commanding officer, Capt. Thomas Flannery, gave me a tour of the family housing at this major installation. In both cases, I couldn't believe we really expected our officers and enlisted personnel to fulfill their obligations to the national defense, if we failed to fulfill our own obligations to them.

I soon viewed one of the most important responsibilities of my position on the House Armed Services Committee was to make improvements in the quality of life for the personnel at both APG and Pax River. In the long run, these improvements would add substantially to the readiness and morale at both facilities.

The bill before us today, Mr. Chairman, fulfills many of the goals I set out to achieve nearly 4 years ago.

Included in this bill are funds to complete the third phase of a three part program to replace the existing barracks at APG. Also included in this bill is more than $30 million to complete the family housing improvements program at this same facility. Each of these ambitious projects were initiated when I first came to the Congress nearly 4 years ago.

At Pax River, groundbreaking for 250 units of new family housing will commence this summer. And this year's authorization compliments this earlier effort by providing funds for a family service center at this installation.

Mr. Chairman, I owe a great deal of gratitude to all the members of your subcommittee and, again, to your excellent staff. I urge all of our colleagues to support this important legislation.

Mr. COLEMAN of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 5604 and ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

Mr. Chairman, I want to commend my colleague, the gentleman from California, for his diligence in crafting this bill as the chairman of the House Armed Services Subcommittee on Military Installations and Facilities. The subcommittee held 17 hearings to consider nearly 1,500 projects at approximately 700 military installations across the country and around the world.

I took the opportunity to testify before the subcommittee on a matter of great importance to my congressional district and our Nation's military preparedness. H.R. 5604 authorizes $24.5 million in military construction moneys for Fort Bliss, TX, in fiscal year 1985.

Fort Bliss is the center for air defense artillery and training in the free world and serves as the hub for modernization of the U.S. Air Defense Force. It is one of the largest military installations in the United States with over 1.1 million acres. It supports a population of nearly 94,000 persons including military and civilian personnel, dependents, and retirees—representing approximately 21 percent of El Paso's population with a dollar impact of nearly $650 million.

The modernization of Fort Bliss will cause a significant number of new soldiers and their families to be stationed in El Paso to undergo training and eventual deployment. In addition, training of our allied troops will continue under this program. I want to express my support for these construction projects and emphasize their importance.

The construction requests include $16 million for a general instruction building to house a modern, permanent academic facility for the U.S. Army Senior Noncommissioned Officers Academy; $4.8 million for a tactical equipment shop; and $3.7 million for modernization of three enlisted personnel dining facilities. These requests are consistent with the Department of Defense recommendations and do not include any add-on items.

● Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, the Stenholm amendment was an excellent proposal, and I regret that we did not have an opportunity to debate it fully and vote on it.

The evidence against Davis-Bacon is clear, and reform of the act was needed years ago. Newsweek magazine, in a major proposed agenda on "How to Get America Back to Work" stated:

> Repeal of the 50-year-old Davis-Bacon is long overdue: by requiring employers on federally funded construction projects to pay workers the "prevailing" wage, Davis-Bacon tends to inflate all construction wages (the prevailing wage is usually defined as the highest in the region) and as a result, ratchets up prices.

Newsweek is correct in assuming that repealing Davis-Bacon would help put more Americans to work.

Reforming Davis-Bacon would also help small business. In my district, most small construction companies refuse to even bid on Government projects because they cannot afford the cost of administrating Davis-Bacon. Small businesses simply don't have the time or the employees to maintain the mountain of paperwork required by the act. As a result, most projects go to larger companies.

Finally, Davis-Bacon's worst fault is its tremendous cost to the taxpayer and its inflationary impact on the construction industry. The Stenholm amendment alone, which only would have applied to military construction in the United States, could have saved at least $100 million. Not a bad savings, considering at the same time it would create jobs and help small business.

The Stenholm amendment was one of fiscal responsibilities. It was pro-jobs. It was anti-inflation. It was for small business. While I regret we were not able to vote for it, it is my hope that the debate on Davis-Bacon will continue. I urge the Committee on Education and Labor to hold hearings on reforming Davis-Bacon, so that we can examine the total impact of the act on both the taxpayer's purse and our Nation's economy.●

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of in time.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired.

Pursuant to the rule, the bill will be considered under the 5-minute rule by title, and each title shall be considered as having been read.

The Clerk will designate section 1.

The text of title I is as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Military Construction Authorization Act, 1985".

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD and open to amendment at any point.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The text of the remainder of the bill is as follows:

COMMITTEE AMENDMENTS

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the first committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 34, line 2, strike out "two hundred and fifty" and insert in lieu thereof "one hundred and eighty".

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the first committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The Clerk proceeded to read the committee amendments.

Mr. DELLUMS (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the committee amendments be considered en bloc, and that they be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The text of the remaining committee amendments is as follows:

Committee amendments: Page 44, line 22, strike out "53,739,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$53,339,000".

Page 53, line 13, strike out "$104,192,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$105,092,000".

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee amendments.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

COMMITTEE AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. DELLUMS

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I have one additional amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The text of the committee amendment offered by Mr. DELLUMS is as follows:

Page 53, line 13, strike out "$104,192,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$105,092,000".

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, this is another committee amendment. It is a substantive amendment. I therefore did not include it in the unanimous consent request to offer all of the technical amendments en bloc. I did so because it is a substantive amendment that would add some $900,000 in lump sum authorization to the Army National Guard construction program to permit construction of a much needed armory in Holdenville, OK.

This amendment, Mr. Chairman, was not included in the subcommittee report to the full committee but it was indeed adopted in the full Armed Services Committee without a dissenting vote, and I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment offered by the gentleman was acted upon and agreed to as part of the committee amendments considered en bloc.

AMENDMENTS OFFERED BY MR. DELLUMS

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I have one additional amendment, the amendment on ground launched cruise missiles.

This is the amendment that would reduce the ground launched cruise missile authorization by some $35 million.

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman indicate what page and line he is talking about?

Mr. DELLUMS. Page 31, line 17.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. DELLUMS: Page 31, line 17, strike out "$37,650,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$2,550,000".

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, as I understand it, this amendment also simultaneously amends another section of the bill, page 3, line 25, and page 44, line 6, and I would ask unanimous consent that these amendments be considered en bloc and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is under the impression that the amendment the gentleman is now describing is the one that he previously offered.

Mr. DELLUMS. It has already been covered under the amendments en bloc? This is the Dellums amendment on the ground launched cruise missile. It is not a technical amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The only floor amendment to be offered by the gentleman that the Clerk had was a two-page floor amendment, the reading of which was waived.

□ 1130

The Clerk will re-report the two amendments offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS].

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendments offered by Mr. DELLUMS. Page 31, line 17, strike out "$37,650,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$2,650,000".

Page 43, line 25, strike out "$2,777,813,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$2,742,813,000".

Page 44, line 6, strike out "$458,729,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$423,729,000".

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, H.R. 5604 authorizes $35 million for construction of basing facilities for the ground launched cruise missile in the Netherlands, but directs that none of the funds can be obligated until a final agreement has been ratified by the Dutch Parliament.

On June 7, 1984, the Dutch Parliament agreed to delay a final decision on base construction and deployment of the ground-launched cruise missile in the Netherlands until November 1, 1985, thereby making it impossible to obligate construction funds in fiscal year 1985.

The Air Force has subsequently advised the committee that start of permanent construction cannot begin until after November 1, 1985.

Mr. Chairman, my amendment would strike the $35 million authorized in H.R. 5604 since the earliest construction could start would be in fiscal year 1986. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from California.

I would just point out to the Members that this amendment really has nothing to do whatsoever with any policy decisions about the desirability or nondesirability of deploying the GLCM system in Europe. It is simply a decision based upon the impossibility of obligating the construction funds in 1985 fiscal year as a consequence of the Dutch Government's decision to delay their own internal decision about whether or not they want to deploy these systems until after the expiration of the 1985 fiscal year in which we are operating.

I support the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendments offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS].

The amendments were agreed to.

AMENDMENTS OFFERED BY MR. HUNTER

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Chairman, I offer amendments, and I ask unanimous consent that the amendments be considered en bloc.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendments offered by Mr. HUNTER: Page 46, line 4, strike out "$364,048,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$363,148,000".

Page 46, line 7, strike out "$140,773,000" and inert in lieu thereof "$139,873,000".

Page 35, strike out lines 16 and 17.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Chairman, I would like to commend the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] and the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KRAMER] and all the members of the committee and the staff for doing an excellent job on this bill.

This amendment, Mr. Chairman, strikes $900,000 that would be utilized for the construction of a new hazardous waste site in Imperial Beach in my district. The site is unnecessary, Mr. Chairman. We presently have a system that works in all the military facilities in San Diego County, in which their hazardous waste is stored. It would be an unnecessary expenditure to the taxpayers and an unnecessary burden to the people of Imperial Beach.

I might just add, Mr. Chairman, that the people of Imperial Beach have just suffered a deluge of wastewater from Mexico over the last 1½ years and have suffered a quarantine of their beaches for almost the entire year of 1983.

They do not need this additional burden and especially in light of the fact that it is not necessary.

I would ask the committee to accept the amendment.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HUNTER. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. DELLUMS. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman has discussed the amendment with this gentleman and we have discussed it on this side of the aisle.

The gentleman certainly is very familiar with this project as it resides in his congressional district. We have been convinced by his wisdom and judgment that this amendment ought to be accepted and we have no problems with it on this side of the aisle and we accept the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. HUNTER. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, we have examined the amendment and we believe that it is a good amendment and ought to be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendments offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. HUNTER].

The amendments were agreed to.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. RAY

Mr. RAY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. RAY: At the end of the bill add the following new section:

ADMINISTRATION OF FOREST PRODUCTS PROGRAM

SEC. . (a) Section 2365 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(A) by striking out "timber and timber products" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "forest products"; and

(B) by striking out "25 percent" and inserting in lieu thereof "40 percent"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(A) for improvements of forest lands;

"(B) for unanticipated contingencies in the administration of forest lands and the production of forest products for which other sources of funds are not available in a timely manner; and

"(C) for expenses to enable operations of forest lands and the production of forest products to continue from the end of one fiscal year through the beginning of the next fiscal year without disruption.

"(2) Subject to paragraph (3), there shall be deposited into the reserve account not later than December 31 of each year, for credit to the preceding fiscal year, an amount equal to one-half of the amount (if any) remaining of the total amount received by the United States during that fiscal year as proceeds from the sale of forest products after (A) the reimbursement of appropriations of the Department of Defense under subsection (d) for expenses of production of forest products during that fiscal year, and (B) the payment to States under subsection (e) for that fiscal year.

"(3) The balance in the reserve account may not exceed $4,000,000. If a deposit under paragraph (2) would cause the balance in the account to exceed that amount, the deposit shall be made only to the extent the amount of the deposit would not cause the balance in the account to exceed $4,000,000.".

(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by subsection (a) shall take effect on October 1, 1984.

(2) The amendment made by subsection (a)(2)(B) shall apply with respect to payments to States for fiscal years beginning after September 30, 1984.

Mr. RAY (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAY. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is a fairness issue and corrects an inequity. It does not cost the Government any new money and instead distributes it in a more fair and equitable way.

Let me explain. Presently military bases do not pay taxes to counties and municipalities. Instead they pay 25 percent of the gross timber sales in lieu of taxes.

This amendment simply increases the percentage of money from 25 to 40 percent and DOD has no objection. It does not alter the military construction budget.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment which I offer today has special meaning for me and to others in the same predicament. I represent a county which is dominated by a military reservation. In fact, Fort Benning, GA, takes up 81 percent of the land area available to provide a tax base in Chattahoochee County.

Mr. Chairman, Chattahoochee County is struggling. It has only one small town, Cusseta, with one manufacturing plant. Chattahoochee is the sixth poorest county in the State. The primary reason for this is not geographical or lack or resources but because it has no tax base from which to draw funds for quality schools and roads.

There is little land on which to farm, no private land on which to obtain timber products, and no space to search for minerals which are most certainly present in the Chattahoochee River Valley. The river, which used to flow swiftly creating beautiful canyons and cliffs that tourists could have appreciated, has now been harnessed upstream for larger cities such as Atlanta and Columbus.

This pretty little town—like it or not—is being sapped by Fort Benning. The people there are proud and self-reliant. They know that a strong defense is necessary to protect our freedom, and they stand behind Fort Benning. But these people are hurting—through no fault of their own, and it is time that something was done for them.

The 1983 Georgia Guide calls Chattahoochee a "metropolitan county." This assumes it operates almost totally as a satellite of the metro area, receiving support in areas such as transportation and education. In this case, it is not true. Chattahoochee County or Cusseta, GA, is separated from Columbus by miles of military base. Consequently, they have to support, in total, their own school system and all other necessary services normally provided to citizens.

One might think that because there are fewer citizens it would cost less. Nothing could be farther from the truth. The old saying "cheaper by the dozen" applies to county management. Chattahoochee has one of the highest costs per student to educate in the State. Why? If there were more students with parents paying into the tax base, they would not have this problem.

But Chattahoochee County is far from unique. This sad story is reflected time and time again across this Nation. My proposal will not solve this problem entirely. But it is a constructive and responsible first step.

From time to time, Fort Benning cuts and sells timber which is located on the reservation. After deducting the operating costs, they give Chattahoochee County 25 percent of what is left. The rest goes into the Treasury.

If Chattahoochee County contained a national forest, its share would be 25 percent of the gross. No one has ever been able to explain to me the reason for this inequity. So I am proposing that we take the first step toward fairness.

If the military timber harvesting programs could afford to pay 25 percent of gross this year, I would be standing here advocating just that increase. But, because several of the services are operating with only a thin margin of profits, 25 percent of gross is out of range now.

But, my amendment would increase the State share to 40 percent of the net with Department of Defense approval. It would also maintain a reserve account from which each service could improve its timber program and thus move toward making a greater profit. This translates into a fairer share for Chattahoochee County and others around the country in the years to come.

Let me take a moment to explain the reserve account. In past years, the Department of Defense has cut the timber, sold it, and deducted its operating costs. What was left was divided with 75 percent going to the Treasury and 25 percent to the county.

Then, the account would be broke until more timber was sold. Contingencies such as fires or insects could not be dealt with unless money was borrowed from other funds. This reserve account would allow the timber management to flow smoothly and more efficiently. It will end up saving money.

Under my proposal, the timber would be cut and sold, and the operating costs deducted—just as before. Then 40 percent of what is left would be paid to the counties. The remainder would be divided 50-50 between the reserve account and the Treasury. When the reserve account has been built up to $4 million, the remainder would all go back to the Treasury.

In conclusion, I urge support for my amendment for two reasons. It would mandate greater efficiency within the Department of Defense. It would also return a larger share of money to counties—like Chattahoochee—which struggle with a limited tax base because Federal land limits the amount of taxable property.

Chattahoochee County and others like it should pay only its fair share for a free America. That share does not include inadequate educational facilities and second-rate roads. This amendment costs the American taxpayers nothing. In the name of plain and simple fairness, I urge its adoption.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAY. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. DELLUMS. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, this again is an amendment which the gentleman has discussed with this gentleman and members of the subcommittee. It is a fairly complex amendment, but as the gentleman describes it it is a fairness issue.

We have been convinced by the gentleman's argument that it is a meritorious amendment. We would accept it on this side of the aisle.

Mr. RAY. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAY. I yield to the gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. KRAMER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, I have had an opportunity to examine this amendment. I have expressed to the gentleman that I had some reservations about it, not because of the desirability amendment, simply because of the financial factors involved.

However, the gentleman has, I think, much to his credit convinced the Department of Defense that this is an excellent amendment. In that light, and in light of the point the gentleman makes about the services that the country governments have to provide without the taxpayers to do so, many of which are provided for the military, I have no objection to the amendment.

Mr. RAY. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased that my colleagues, the gentlemen from Georgia, Mr. Doug Barnard and Mr. Lindsay Thomas, have joined me in sponsoring this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Ray].

AMENDMENTS OFFERED BY MR. HOWARD

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman, I offer two amendments and I ask unanimous consent that they be considered en bloc.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendments offered by Mr. Howard: Page 8, line 15, strike out "$101,076,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$105,876,000".

Page 40, line 9, strike out "$3,133,974,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$3,138,774,000".

Page 44, line 6, strike out "$160,053,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$164,853,000".

Mr. HOWARD (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendments be considered as read and printed in the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

□ 1140

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman, I have two amendments to offer today to the fiscal year 1985 military construction bill. The two amendments—one to title I and one to title VI—will have the single effect of providing $4.8 million in additional funds for desperately needed rehabilitation work on the Wherry family housing units at Fort Monmouth, NJ.

The condition of these units is an embarrassment to the Army and a source of tremendous frustration and discomfort to the Army, Navy, and Marine families who live in them. Last August, the conditions precipitated complaints of unprecedented proportions. Articles in local papers related horror stories of the dilapidated condition of the structures, including caved in ceilings, rusty water, leaky roofs, roach infestation, and inoperative heating and plumbing systems.

The Commanding General at Fort Monmouth attempted to have the units declared substandard so that residents would not have to pay the same quarters allowance as residents living in more modern accommodations. But because of restraints on such a designation imposed by Congress in 1983, his request was denied.

The Army has prepared a three-phase, $15.3 million rehabilitation plan to correct the housing problem. The $4.8 million I am requesting today will be in addition to the $1.67 million already in the bill. Together, the funds will pay phase I and most of phase II, rehabilitating a total of 212 of the fort's 511 units.

Fort Monmouth is the center of the Army's electronics and communications research and development. In view of the serious health and safety problems associated with the dilapidated housing on the base, I urge my colleagues to accept my amendments.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOWARD. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. DELLUMS. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

In order to expedite the proceedings, the Chair would like to indicate to my distinguished colleague that we have discussed this item fully, and we feel that this is a meritorious amendment. It addresses a clearly important need. We would accept the amendment on this side of the aisle.

Mr. HOWARD. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOWARD. I yield to the gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Chairman, I have had an opportunity to examine the amendment. I believe that the expeditious action to in fact increase the remedial schedule with respect to this problem is warranted. The cost is not particularly extensive. It is work that has to be done anyway. Certainly we accept the amendment.

Mr. HOWARD. I thank the gentleman.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the designation of the page and line will be changed to page 40, line 24, instead of page 44, line 6.

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendments, as modified, offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Howard].

The amendments, as modified, were agreed to.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. LOEFFLER

Mr. LOEFFLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Loeffler:

Page 9, after line 10, add the following new subsection:

(c)(1) The Secretary of the Army shall name a suitable wing or other portion of replacement facilities constructed after the date of the enactment of this Act at the Brooke Army Medical Center, San Antonio, Texas, for Senator John Goodwin Tower and shall name a suitable wing or other portion of those facilities for Representative Abraham "Chick" Kazen, Junior.

(2) Paragraph (1) shall take effect at noon on January 3, 1985.

Mr. LOEFFLER. Mr. Chairman, the bill before us contains language that requires the Army to proceed with the design on a replacement facility at Brooke Army Medical Center in San Antonio, TX. This is a facility that is desperately needed and has been unjustifiably delayed. Brooke is a hospital which serves over 100,000 people in the immediate San Antonio area as well as being the major medical center for the Army in the south central part of the country. In addition, Brooke provides an invaluable function as a major teaching hospital and as the home for the world famous burn center.

My amendment would add a provision which requires two separate portions of the new medical center to be named in honor of our friend and colleague, Congressman Abraham "Chick" Kazen, Jr., and for the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Senator John Tower.

The purpose of this amendment is simply to recognize in a small way the contributions that John Tower and Chick Kazen, who will be leaving the Congress after this year, have made to enhancing our overall military posture and to improving the quality of life for both our active and retired military. Congressman Kazen and Senator Tower have long recognized that proper medical care is essential both to providing the necessary quality of life and also for meeting the contingency needs of our Armed Forces.

As the months progress and their retirement from the Congress grows closer, many of us will have much more to say about the distinguished gentleman from Texas and the senior Senator from Texas in recognition of the outstanding service which they have rendered to my State, our Nation, and indeed to all in the world who care deeply about peace and freedom.

As all of us know, the distinguished gentleman from Texas, Mr. Kazen, has made a tremendous contribution to the Congress and to the Nation on issues involving the Armed Forces of the United States. His service to the people of the 23d District of Texas and to the military installations in both the San Antonio area and the entire State represent the finest of our bipartisan tradition in national security affairs. In this small way, we recognize the dedication which Chick Kazen has shown during his many years of public service. I salute him as a respected colleague whose friendship I shall always cherish.

With this amendment, I also offer an initial tribute to the man who first brought me into the legislative political arena and who has consistently been my mentor and my friend. Additionally, on a broader scale, I offer this amendment to thank John Tower for his outstanding leadership in defense matters across the entire spectrum of our national security and for his leadership in behalf of our Texas installations, which are among the finest in our land. I salute the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee with admiration and affection.

I ask my colleagues to join me in supporting this amendment honoring two distinguished and outstanding Americans.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LOEFFLER. I yield to the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee.

Mr. DELLUMS. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, it certainly goes without saying that this is a bipartisan amendment.

The Chair feels that this is a meritorious amendment. We certainly have not had an opportunity to serve with the distinguished gentleman from the other body, but over the years we have served with our distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Kazen]. We have come out many times on opposite sides of the issues, but I cherish his friendship. He has been a marvelous person and a diligent worker. He is a member of this subcommittee that brings this bill to the body at this time. I am sure that there will be a number of statements, feelings and emotions generated and expressed over the next several weeks, prior to the leaving, the retiring, of our distinguished colleague from this body, but suffice to say at this moment this is a small token, a small gesture, to make a very powerful statement of friendship and affection, and we certainly stand in unity with our distinguished colleague from Texas who offered this amendment.

We accept the amendment with joy and with admiration, particularly for our distinguished colleague from Texas [Mr. Kazen].

Mr. LOEFFLER. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LOEFFLER. I yield to the ranking Republican Member on the subcommittee.

Mr. KRAMER. I appreciate the gentleman yielding.

First, let me thank the gentleman for bringing to this body this very appropriate amendment and recommendation.

I think anything I could say beyond that would be repetitive of the remarks that the gentleman from Texas and the gentleman from California have already made about the service of our two distinguished colleagues.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Loeffler] has expired.

(On request of Mr. Kramer and by unanimous consent, Mr. Loeffler was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. KRAMER. To "Chick" Kazen, just let me say: Congratulations on a job well done.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LOEFFLER. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. I do not want to delay the passage of this worthwhile amendment. I do want to say, though, I had the privilege of coming to the Congress with Chick Kazen 18 years ago in the 90th Congress. He is an outstanding person, he will be missed. We all love you, Chick.

Mr. LOEFFLER. Mr. Chairman, I might conclude this very worthy debate by saying: Chick, we love you, and we salute you.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Loeffler].

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. DICKS

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Dicks: At the end of the bill add the following new section:

FISH HATCHERY, FORT LEWIS, WASHINGTON

Sec.   . (a) The Secretary of the Army shall transfer, or otherwise make available, to the Secretary of the Interior, without reimbursement, a portion of Fort Lewis, Washington, adjacent to Clear Creek, Washington, consisting of 135 acres, more or less, that has been identified by feasibility report dated May, 1982, as suitable as a site for a fish hatchery.

(b)(1) Land transferred or otherwise made available to the Secretary of the Interior under subsection (a) may be used only for a fish hatchery and for related purposes.

(2) The Secretary of the Army may require such additional terms and conditions with respect to the administration of this section as the Secretary considers appropriate.

Mr. DICKS (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, my amendment directs the Secretary of the Army to make available certain property on Ft. Lewis Army Base for use as a fish hatchery. The need for the amendment is quite clear to anyone familiar with the fishing industry in the Pacific Northwest.

Washington State is very dependent upon fishing and its related activities both for the commercial value of the fish and the tourism value of the sports fishery. The various Indian tribes in the State are also dependent upon for their livelihood.

During the last few years the fishing industry in the State has declined dramatically, both because of previous overfishing and because of the effects of El Nino. The Washington Department of Fisheries, the commercial and sports fishermen and the Indian tribes are working together to rebuild the industry, imposing season closures and restricting catches to allow more fish to escape and spawn. Hatcheries are operating at full capacity to increase the overall numbers of fish, and rivers that once contained fish runs are being cleared and replanted.

South Puget Sound, the area I represent, has particular problems because its main feeder, the Nisqually River, has few areas which are acceptable for use as hatcheries. For a hatchery to be effective, it must have water which is relatively bacteria-free, and which moves at a brisk velocity. In order to compensate for not having these elements, expensive pumping systems must be maintained constantly, and the hatcheries are no longer cost-effective. Only one location with the maximum combination of favorable elements has been located on the Nisqually River. It is located on Clear Creek, on acreage that once belonged to the Nisqually Tribe but now is part of Fort Lewis Army Base.

The Army has always been a good neighbor to the Nisqually and surrounding residents. Constructing a hatchery on the Nisqually River is a high priority for these people, and would be a boost to the local economy. My amendment allows the Army to determine the most acceptable method for making the land available. It is only to be used for the purpose of operating a fish hatchery, and it does not impact the important military operations at Fort Lewis. I would therefore urge my colleagues to accept it as part of the military construction authorization bill, to allow the project to go forward.

Mr. Chairman, at this point I would be prepared to yield to my colleague from California [Mr. Dellums], the distinguished chairman. I have had a chance to discuss this amendment with him.

Mr. DELLUMS. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Again, the gentleman from Washington has discussed this amendment with the gentleman from California and other members of the subcommittee. This is clearly a meritorious amendment. It is vital. It is important. It seems to me that it does a great deal of good. It is logical, it is rational, it serves a terribly important service to our native American brothers and sisters in this part of the country, and we certainly, without equivocation, stand in support of the gentleman's amendment and we accept it on this side of the aisle.

Mr. DICKS. I want to say how much I appreciate the chairman's help; he is truly one of the outstanding leaders in this Congress, and his concern and interest in the affairs of the people of Washington State, and particularly the Nisqually Tribe will be deeply appreciated by all of the people of our State, because this amendment will provide a substantial increase in the fishing resources of our State which will benefit all of our citizens.

I appreciate the chairman's leadership and willingness to work with me on this important amendment.

Mr. DELLUMS. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DICKS. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. KRAMER. First let me thank the gentleman for his most gracious remarks that he made about me before, and let me also rise in support of this amendment, and compliment the gentleman for bringing it to the attention of the body.

The gentleman may not know this, but more years ago than I would care to recall, I had the pleasure of living in the gentleman's district, and was stationed at Fort Lewis, where I was a Judge Advocate General officer, and we use to have a yearly event there with the Nisqually Tribe that created great media coverage, but was disruptive, I think, to good community relations in the Fort Lewis area.

I think the gentleman has, through hard work and diligence, found a way to resolve a most difficult situation there on a very favorable basis. I think he is to be commended for his efforts, and certainly speaking on behalf of the minority and future JAG officers, who have to serve at Fort Lewis, we will allow them to do other work, because I think that we will be able to put this problem behind us.

Mr. DICKS. I certainly appreciate the gentleman's comments.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Washington.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DELLUMS. I yield to my colleague, the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CONYERS. I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Chairman, I want to commend the gentleman on the progress of this bill, and particularly the amendment in which the deployment of the cruise missiles in the Netherlands has been postponed.

Mr. Chairman, I want to congratulate this committee for a very fine job that it has done in this respect.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Dellums amendment.

I have previously made clear my opposition to deployment of cruise and Pershings to Western Europe. I believe they are destabilizing, antagonistic—both to the Soviets and many in the Nato Alliance—and are far too costly. There is no need to revisit those particular arguments here.

The Dellums amendment goes even beyond these arguments. What my distinguished colleague is proposing is that we delay our decision on deployment to the Netherlands until the people of that country, and the Government, decide for themselves whether or not they want to be participants in accepting the cruise and Pershing. This is an entirely reasonable proposal.

The Dutch have experienced much turmoil and dissension regarding the decision to accept the cruise and pershing. Had the present Government decided to accept the missiles they surely would have not survived politically—this is how strong the sentiment is against deployment.

Would it be intelligent foreign policy for us to decide nonetheless that we are going to go ahead with our deployment plans in spite of the reservations of both the people and the Government of the Netherlands? What kind of message will this send to those people? What kind of message will it send to the Soviets, who just in the last week have shown signs that they are willing to talk and negotiate with us? What possible benefit could we derive from authorizing the funds for a project on which the Dutch will not decide for at least 1½ years?

I think that we have too many domestic problems to be appropriating moneys for projects the recipients of which will not decide if they even want it for more than 1 year. I think that there are more important ways to spend the taxpayers money. For every $1 billion spent for guided missile production an estimated 20,715 jobs are created, as contrasted to $71,550 created in civilian industries such as education. This money is far more needed in our inner cities.

Additionally, deployment of cruise and pershing missiles has not met its purported objective of enticing the Soviets to negotiate on arms control. Quite to the contrary, deployment has nearly closed the doors of communication, the United States has still not ratified the Threshold Test Ban Treaty, the Peaceful Nuclear Explosions Treaty and SALT II.

Part of this cruise and pershing system is already deployed. The political statement has been made to the Soviets. What I am saying, in effect, is let us save ourselves some money. If the ultimate objective is negotiation to dismantle all of these weapons and if what we want to do is negotiate back from the SS-20, back from the pershing, back from the cruise, let us not pursue deployment so vigorously particularly in the face of unreadiness of our allies. Let us not antagonize even our allies. Let us exercise some fiscal responsibility at a time of unprecedented budget deficits and let us exercise some measure of prudence at a time of an unprecedented communication breakdown with the Soviet Union.

Mr. DELLUMS. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to enter into a brief colloquy with the chairman of the subcommittee, my friend from California [Mr. Dellums] if I could.

First of all, I want to congratulate the gentleman and his committee for a job well done. I represent a district in North Louisiana in which there are two large military bases; Barksdale Air Force Base and Fort Polk. Both had, I thought, legitimate requests; both have been taken care of in this bill, and I thank the gentleman for that.

There is a question still in my mind about a physical fitness training center at Fort Polk. As the chairman knows, the fort has grown quite large in the last few years with redeployment of troops and the need now is for a large facility than the bill contains. Your bill has about $2 million for a training center that frankly, the fort now believes, could be eliminated if a larger facility were substituted with some design planning.

We are in the process now, working with the other body and hopefully, by the time this bill goes to conference, the other body will have arrangements for the larger physical fitness center.

I just wanted to thank the chairman for his conversations with me, and ask him to consider if in fact the other body does have this amendment, to consider if favorably in the conference, if possible.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROEMER. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. DELLUMS. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

We would assume that the gentleman will be working with the representatives from his State in the other body in trying to bring this matter into the bill on the other side. We certainly would see no problem with that, and if it is included in the bill, as we go to conference, we would be prepared to look favorably on the gentleman's request.

Mr. ROEMER. I thank the gentleman, and in return I assure him that we will work toward saving money and improving the physical fitness at the fort. If we can accomplish both things, I would appreciate his support.

Mr. DELLUMS. I thank the gentleman very much.

Mr. THOMAS of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment by my friend and colleague and commend him for his careful and thoughtful work on this subject. I am a cosponsor.

I think it is important to remember that this amendment is not going to cost the taxpayers a single dime. In fact, it is ultimately going to mean more money going into the Federal Treasury and to local governments. That will come because the amendment provides an increased allocation of timber proceeds to be used to make the forestry management program more efficient and productive.

I should add that before I was elected to the Congress, I was actively involved in forestry management. I probably hold the record in Congress as the Member who has planted the most pine trees with his own hands.

So I speak with some experience when I say that the timber management program of the Defense Department is going to benefit from this amendment. And I am delighted to see that the local governments will be getting fairer treatment under the allocation formula.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. FRENZEL

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. FRENZEL: On page 73, after line 14, add the following new section:

"SEC. 814. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall reduce (either by across-the-board reductions or by such selective reductions of individual authorizations as he considers appropriate) the total amount of authorizations provided for in this Act (computed without regard to this section) by not less than five percent.".

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, I apologize to the chairman of the subcommittee and to all of the Members for not giving advance notice of this amendment. Unfortunately, there is an important tax conference, and various reconciliation and budget conferences, which did not permit my giving earlier notice on this amendment.

I can understand the consternation of the committee, and I can understand that they will probably want to vote against it simply because they have not had enough time to consider it.

However, I think Members of this committee will understand that I have been exceedingly concerned about our willingness to overshoot the budget limitations which we ourselves set when we passed our House budget resolution.

To refresh memories, I would restate that we said that for ordinary Government programs, we would increase 3.5 percent. For military security, we would increase 3.5 percent plus cost-of-living, and for means-tested programs that affected the needy there would be a standard of cost of living plus 3½ percent.

I have attempted, as the House has gone about its business, to reduce authorizations and appropriations to the standard that we set for ourselves. Unfortunately, very few of the committees seem to want to bide by those standards. I am doing my best simply to try to remind the Members of the body that there is such a thing as fiscal discipline.

Mr. Chairman, as I look at the committee report, I note that the authorizations for last year were about $7.3 billion. The President, this year asks for $10.5 billion. This House committee is presenting at this time about $9.3 billion in authorizations.

□ 1200

That is 26.2 percent over fiscal year 1984, which is an increase of about three times the amount which the House said should be its limitation.

In addition, Mr. Chairman, in reviewing the report further, one finds that there are many projects for which only the first year's need has been authorized in terms of dollars. But those projects are authorized and going forward.

An example is the Madigan Army Medical Center project of a third of a billion dollars, with only $11 million authorized in this bill. There are many such examples of projects which will cost hundreds of million of dollars in the future.

So in this way this bill is creating an entitlement program for the future. We are creating expenses for the future which are building deficits that are not contemplated in our budget.

I cannot speak for or against any of the programs in this bill. I already apologized for being a little late and a little short in being able to look the program over. I cannot tell my colleagues which are good projects. I assume they are all good because I think the committee normally does a workmanlike job.

What I am saying, however, in my amendment is that no matter how good all of the items are, the total far exceeds the standard the House set for itself. As long as we approve, there will be no discipline among us.

So in offering this amendment, I am simply asking, pleading, begging, for a little discipline. I might say that my amendment will reduce less than half a billion dollars. It will still leave this authorization bill about 20 percent over last year, which will mean that that is about double the standard, twice as much, as we set for ourselves. I dare not try to cut more because I do not believe the amendment will pass even as it is, but I wanted to give some Members a chance to vote for fiscal sobriety in a House in which that attribute is seldom seen.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike that last word.

Mr. Chairman, first of all, I would like to say to the gentleman that 5 minutes ago we received this amendment. I do not think that is a reasonable, rational or logical way to proceed. I think we have to move forward thoughtfully. We certainly would have been prepared to address the gentleman's amendment in a very serious context.

I think any time amendments are offered on the floor of Congress, they ought to be offered seriously, not symbolically.

I would now like to make a few substantive arguments. The administration, on the gentleman's side of the aisle, requested $10.5 billion. The subcommittee and full committee of the Committee on Armed Services, in its wisdon, chose to reduce that figure by some $1.5 billion. With Members' add-ons of projects in their various districts, we were then able to reduce that figure totally, with adjustments for those add-ons, to $1.2 billion, an almost 10-percent cut from that requested by the administration.

The second point the gentleman chooses to make is if my distinguished colleagues, the author of the amendment, would look at the military construction function, he would understand what we understand: that the military construction budget, unfortunately, is driven by other decisions, decisions that the gentleman who offered this amendment saw fit to support. If you support the build-down of the B-1 bomber, the military construction budget reflects that. If you support the deployment of the MX missile, the military construction budget reflects that. If you suport the Rapid Deployment Force, this budget reflects that.

This gentleman has opposed all of those efforts, and if my colleague who offered this amendment had joined this gentleman in opposition to the deployment and the going forward with these weapons systems, this military construction budget would not be at the figure that it is at this particular point.

The third point the gentleman chooses to make is that the military construction budget does not stand outside of the 0500 budget function. This budget is brought to the floor separately, but it is an inherent part of the 0500 defense function; therefore, the figure that is included in this budget cannot be taken out of context with that total figure.

If my distinguished colleague is joining this gentleman in some substantial cuts in the overall military budget, then that makes sense. This 5-percent across-the-board cut would perhaps make better sense on the larger authorization bill. I am not sure that my colleague will support a 5-percent overall cut in the overall military authorization budget, which would then make this budget consistent with that. The larger budget drives the decisions that are inherent in this particular budget.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DELLUMS. I will yield in just a moment. I will be very pleased to enter into a colloquy with the gentleman.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, this is just this gentleman's belief: While I chair the subcommittee, that does not preclude my responsibility as an individual Member of Congress. As an individual Member of Congress, I would assert to my colleague that across-the-board amendments are really not very courageous amendments because it allows Members to have it both ways. You can be for the MX, for the deployment of the Pershing cruise missile, for the B-1 bomber, for all the weapons systems, and then say, "But I am for fiscal austerity." But when it comes to saying how do you express that fiscal austerity in some tangible and specific way, are you really and truly prepared to bite the bullet and challenge the madness of this escalating nuclear arms race, I find many of my colleagues falling away from making those kinds of decisions, but they are prepared to make an across-the-board effort because it does not require you to stand in diametric opposition to the insanity of some of these weapons systems that threaten our lives and threaten our children and threaten our children's children.

It would seem to me that if we begin to address policy on the floor of this Congress, start to ask significant questions about whether we need these moneys not for a Madigan Hospital, that is a benign part of this budget, but whether we need MX missiles and Trident missiles and D-5A missiles, and B-1 bombers, then we can begin to make some rational and intelligent and courageous decisions.

Across-the-board cuts take no courage. It does not require anyone to bite the bullet; it just says, "I am for fiscal austerity but I am for the escalation of our arms race right across the board." I think there are some contradictions in that respect. I would rather see us be quite courageous.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. DELLUMS was allowed to proceed for 5 additional minutes.)

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I will now yield to my distinguished colleague for the purpose of entering into a colloquy, but before doing that, what I am trying to assert is that over the years this gentleman has felt very strongly about cutting our military budget, and this gentleman has been prepared to try to rationalize those cuts not on the basis of some across-the-board, nebulous budget austerity, but to say to the American people, we do not need certain weapons system, we do not need the embracing of certain policies, so whatever cuts we make in the military budget are made on the basis of rational policy decisions and a statement before the American people that we cut x amount of dollars because we cut a weapons system.

Finally, it was very interesting and very curious to this gentleman, who happens to be on the Democratic side of the aisle, that our Republican Secretary of Defense said that the smoke and mirror cuts that we often make in the Congress really, finally, in the long run cost the American taxpayers more money because we lack the courage to cut weapons systems. We in many instances defer, delay, push back, and all we do is delay the cost. But when it come to really grappling with the serious, courageous decisions of stopping weapons systems, how many weapons systems have we stopped in the 14 years that this gentleman has been in Congress?

We have not even stopped the MX missile, but we did bracket those weapons systems with certain language that gives the illusion that we stopped them, but we have stopped no system. It would seem to me if you want to talk about major cuts, then we ought to talk about major cuts and use significant debate on policy questions as a backdrop for those cuts and moving against weapons systems that threaten our lives and threaten the lives of our children as an important one.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DELLUMS. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota for the purpose of enthusiastic debate.

Mr. FRENZEL. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, I probably have less enthusiasm for this than the gentleman, for which I apologize, as I apologized for my amendment.

I will say this, however. I give the gentleman A-plus for bravery and heroism and courage if he wants it.

Mr. DELLUMS. I do not need it. I will give myself a rating.

Mr. FRENZEL. May I say I have not voted for any authorizations for the military this year. I have not voted for any appropriations. I did not vote for them last year. I voted against a number of the systems. Some of them I supported. I am not challenging madness or insanity. What I am trying to do is to restore some fiscal discipline in this House.

My principal objection to the military budget is a little different from that of the gentleman from California. I think it is one the country cannot afford, and I do the best I can. I will say to the gentleman that his courageous attacks on systems have not been terribly successful. I have been here for 14 years with the gentleman. He is right, we have never eliminated a system. Occasionally, however, we have passed the kind of amendment I am talking about.

I do not blame the gentleman for finding it distasteful. If I were in the gentleman's shoes and worked hard on putting a bill together, I would be opposed to it, too. I hope the gentleman understands that it is the only way I have to attack the bill.

With respect to the Madigan hospital, I was not questioning its wisdom or its value. I was merely suggesting that it is one of the items in the bill—and there are many others like it—on which we are incurring deferred liabilities for the future, the dollars for which are not totally authorized in this bill, and so we will have enormous expenses for the future.

I applaud the gentleman's speech, but I do not take the same attitude on the military budget that he does. I want us to be secure, but I do not want to throw money around foolishly.

Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I understand his position in this matter.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL].

The amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. If there are no further amendments to this bill, under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. DURBIN] having assumed the chair, Mr. GLICKMAN, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 5604) to authorize certain construction at military installations for fiscal year 1985, and for other purposes, pursuant to House Resolution 529, he reported the bill back to the House with sundry amendments adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment? If not, the Chair will put them en gros.

The amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 312, nays 49, not voting 72, as follows:

AUTHORIZING THE CLERK TO MAKE CORRECTIONS IN ENGROSSMENT OF H.R. 5604, MILITARY CONSTRUCTION AUTHORIZATION ACT, 1985

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that, in the engrossment of the bill, H.R. 5604, the Clerk be authorized to correct section numbers, punctuation, and cross references and to make such other technical and conforming changes as may be necessary to reflect the actions of the House in amending the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks, and to include extraneous matter therein, on the bill just passed, H.R. 5604.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO HAVE UNTIL 12 NOON SATURDAY, JUNE 23, 1984, TO FILE CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 4170, THE DEFICIT REDUCTION AND TAX REFORM ACT OF 1984

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the conferees on the bill, H.R. 4170, the Deficit Reduction and Tax Reform Act of 1984, have until 12 noon on Saturday, June 23, 1984, to file a conference report to accompany the bill, and that there be an additional part of today's CONGRESSIONAL RECORD printed to contain the conference report.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

Mr. CONABLE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman from Florida if he is not being somewhat optimistic about noon tomorrow on this. We seem to be moving rather slowly in the conference. It is the instruction of the chairman that we seek that time; is it?

Mr. GIBBONS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONABLE. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. GIBBONS. Yes; it is.

It may be necessary, I would say to the gentleman from New York, that we have to get an additional extension. But right now we hope we can meet the 12 noon deadline tomorrow.

Mr. CONABLE. Mr. Speaker, I have no real objection to the proposal. But under my reservation I just wanted to express some doubt. We are working very hard in the conference and I believe we should preserve the right to file the report so that we can bring it up next week.

So, Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5(b) of rule I, the Chair announces that he will postpone further proceedings today on each question of adopting resolutions or on ordering the previous question on resolutions reported from the Committee on Rules on which a recorded vote or the yeas and nays are ordered, or on which the vote is objected to under clause 4 of rule 15.

Such rollcall votes, if postponed, will be taken after debate has been concluded on both resolutions, and after each question to be determined by a "nonrecord" vote has been disposed of, the Chair will then put the question on each resolution or on the previous question thereon, on which further proceedings were postponed.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 5680, FEDERAL PAY EQUITY AND MANAGEMENT IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 1984

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 526 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 526

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 1(b) of rule XXIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5680) to promote pay equity and to eliminate certain discriminatory wage-setting practices within the Federal civil service; to establish a performance management and recognition system; to improve the Senior Executive Service; and for other purposes, and the first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. All points of order against the consideration of the bill for failure to comply with the provisions of section 402(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 (Public Law 93-344) are hereby waived. After general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed one hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule by titles instead of by sections, and each title shall be considered as having been read. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit. After the passage of H.R. 5680, the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service shall be discharged from the further consideration of the bill S. 958, and it shall be in order, section 402(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 (Public Law 93-344) to the contrary notwithstanding, to consider said bill in the House, and it shall then be in order in the House to move to strike out all after the enacting clause of the said bill and to insert in lieu thereof the provisions contained in H.R. 5680 as passed by the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore [Mr. DANIEL]. The gentleman from California [Mr. BEILENSON] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. LOTT] for the purposes of debate only, and, pending that, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 526 is an open rule providing for the consideration of H.R. 5680. The Federal Pay Equity and Management Improvement Act of 1984. The rule waives section 402(a) of the Budget Act, which requires legislation authorizing appropriations to be reported by May 15 prior to the start of the fiscal year in which the authorizations are first effective. This waiver is necessary to allow the House to consider H.R. 5680 since it contains provisions which technically constitute authorizations of appropriations for fiscal year 1985 but the bill was not reported until June 11, 1984.

In addition, the rule provides for consideration of the bill by titles, instead of by sections, with each title considered as read. The rule also provides for one motion to recommit.

Finally, the rule provides for a "Senate hookup." It provides that, after the passage of H.R. 5680, it shall be in order to consider the Senate-passed companion bill, S. 958, in the House and to move to strike all after the enacting clause of that bill and insert in lieu thereof the provisions of H.R. 5680 as passed by the House. The rule also waives section 402(a) of the Budget Act against the consideration of S. 958, so that the Senate hookup can be achieved in an orderly fashion and any differences between House and Senate versions of this legislation can be promptly resolved.

This is a simple and straightforward open rule. The only waivers provided are to allow consideration of the House and Senate bills despite their technical violation of the May 15 reporting deadline contained in section 402(a) of the budget act. The rule will allow full and open consideration of this important legislation dealing with sex discrimination and employee performance in the Federal Civil Service.

I urge adoption of this rule.

□ 1240

Mr. LOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 526 is an open rule providing for the consideration of H.R. 5680, the Federal Pay Equity and Management Improvement Act. The rule waives section 402(a) of the Budget Act against consideration of the bill because the bill was reported on June 11, and section 402(a) requires that authorizations be reported by May 15.

Mr. Speaker, the rule provides for 1 hour of general debate to be divided between the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service. The bill will be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule by title instead of by section, and each title shall be considered as read. So this is an open rule, permitting the consideration of any germane amendment.

The other feature of this rule that I would call to the attention of my colleagues is the provision for considering the Senate companion bill after the House bill has been passed. The rule provides that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service will be discharged from S. 958, and that bill will be considered in the House, and it will be in order to move to strike the Senate language and insert the language of the House-passed measure. Section 402(a) is waived against the consideration of the Senate bill. This provision of the rule is not unusual and is done to facilitate going to conference with the other body.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 5680 consists of three titles. The first title calls for the Office of Personnel Management to conduct a 7-month study into discriminatory wage setting practices and wage differentials in the executive branch, and is confined to discrimination and wage differentials between male and female employees holding comparable positions.

Title II of the bill abolishes the present merit pay system for supervisors and managers in GS-13 to GS-15 positions—approximately 110,000 employees—and replaces it with a new performance management and recognition system under which five ratings would be established for determining whether employees shall be eligible for comparability, merit, and performance award pay increases.

Finally, title III makes certain adjustments in laws governing the Senior Executive Service, including elimination of the 50-percent limit on the number of senior executives in an agency eligible for performance awards, establishing in its place a dollar limit of from 2 to 10 percent of total payroll, and establishing a 5 percent of base pay minimum award for individuals, while retaining the current 20 percent maximum award. The bill also revises the current limit on SES political appointees from 10 percent of the SES positions Governmentwide, to 10 percent of the number of filled SES positions in the preceding fiscal year. In addition, the current limit of 25 percent of SES positions in an agency is changed to 25 percent of the filled SES slots in that agency in the preceding year.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 5680 was reported from the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service by voice vote on May 31. However, minority views were filed by seven of the committee Republicans. Moreover, the administration has expressed opposition to the bill on several grounds, including the unrealistic timetable for completing the title I study; the new appeal right for managers and supervisors in title II who receive a less than successful rating; the costly new merit pay awards; the reduction in SES political appointees in title III; and the Executive Level I cap for senior executive bonuses.

Mr. Speaker, another issue was raised at the Rules Committee hearing in the testimony and request of our colleague from Illinois [Mrs. MARTIN]. She had drafted an amendment to apply the new pay equity study to the Congress as well as to the executive branch. Because that amendment expands the scope of the bill, it would require a germaneness waiver to be offered. I offered an amendment to the rule in committee to permit Mrs. MARTIN to offer her amendment on the floor. But unfortunately my attempt went down on a voice vote.

Mr. Speaker, we are notorious in this Congress for exempting ourselves from every law we apply to the rest of the Government and the rest of the country—be it job safety, environmental, age, race, sex, or disability discrimination, freedom of information, or whatever. The old bugaboo is raised that we can't subject ourselves to the laws we enact because this would bring the Justice Department down on the Congress and therefore breach the separation of powers doctrine.

Well, that's a rather interesting and neat legalistic argument, but I don't think it will wash with out constituents who must put up with the various laws and regulations we subject them to.

Nor was this novel justification for exempting ourselves from the laws we passed one which was contemplated by the framers of our Constitution. James Madison, who is considered the father of our Constitution and the genius who created our system of checks and balances and separation of powers certainly did not think this would require that Congress should be a unique class—above the laws it enacts. On the contrary, in Federalist Paper No. 57, he said just the opposite. In his words, one of the circumstances which would restrain the House of Representatives from oppressive measures was that the Congress, and I quote, "can make no law which will not have its full operation on themselves and their friends, as well as on the great mass of the society." Madison went on, and I quote:

> This has always been deemed one of the strongest bonds by which human policy can connect the rulers and the people together. It creates between them that communion of interests and sympathy of sentiments of which few governments have furnished examples; but without which every government degenerates into tyranny.

Madison then posed the question: "What is to restrain the House of Representatives from making legal discriminations in favor of themselves and a particular class of society." And he answered that question as follows:

> The genius of the whole system; the nature of just and constitutional laws; and, above all, the vigilant and manly spirit which actuates the people of America—a spirit which nourishes freedom, and in return is nourished by it.

And Madison concluded this discussion as follows:

> If this spirit shall ever be so far debased as to tolerate a law not obligatory on the legislature, as well as on the people, the people will be prepared to tolerate anything but liberty.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is clear that or forefathers never intended for us to exempt ourselves from the laws we impose upon the people. On the contrary, they thought our system was dependent on the fact that the laws we enacted would be just as applicable to the Congress as to the people.

And yet, we are told we cannot even study sex discrimination in this body by even considering such an amendment to this bill. Instead we are given vague promises of how this is being handled by another committee which may report something at a later date. On that same day in the Rules Committee that the Martin amendment was rejected out of hand, our committee rejected my attempt to make in order an amendment to the Civil Rights Act of 1984, the Grove City College response bill, that would have applied the antidiscrimination provisions of various laws to the Congress.

Our colleague from Illinois is to be commended on keeping before us our own hypocrisy in evading and avoiding the very laws and requirements we impose on others. I think it is high time we faced up to this double standard and did something about it. We have heard too many appeals for patience. We have had too many promises of action tomorrow, and tomorrow, and tomorrow. The time to act was yesterday. I urge my colleagues to heed well the words of our colleague from Illinois as well as the warnings of Madison. The longer we wait, the more we debase ourselves and threaten our system of government.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentlewoman from Illinois [Mrs. MARTIN].

Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman has spoken well on problems that many of us have with what we see as an incredibly two-faced look at how Americans should be treated and what Americans come under what law.

There was a lesson in Watergate that said not even a President is above the law, and yet somehow in this Congress we argue we are. I do not understand it, but because I was raised in an environment so that I still believed in the tooth fairy until I was 18 years old, I am giving, in effect, in my own heart, one more chance.

And in that light, I wish to engage the gentlewoman from Ohio in a colloquy.

Ms. OAKAR. If the gentlewoman would yield, I thank the gentlewoman. I believe in the tooth fairy, too.

Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois. I had hoped as you know to offer an amendment to the Federal pay equity bill before us which would have broadened the scope to include Federal employees, not just the executive branch, but those who work for us in the legislative branch.

The Committee on Rules did not grant such a waiver and now we have a resolution introduced by the gentlewoman from Maine [Ms. Snowe] which proposes a study of the legislative branch of government.

May I inquire of the gentlewoman what her attitude on this resolution is?

Ms. OAKAR. Like my friend from Illinois, I am a cosponsor of House Concurrent Resolution 239. I have publicly stated on many occasions that I fully support a study of the legislative branch. I urge Members who are not cosponsors of that bill to get on board on that bill and next week, as you know, hearings will be held by the Committee on House Administration on this resolution and I am a member of the committee, as my friend from Illinois was a member of the committee.

And like the gentlewoman I will be testifying in favor of the resolution.

Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois. Is it your understanding, so there be no confusion on this issue, that that hearing will make sure that such a final product will include the Congress of the United States and its employees under the study?

□ 1250

Ms. OAKAR. Absolutely. That is not only the thrust of the resolution, but that resolution relates to the jurisdiction of that committee. They would not have jurisdiction to do otherwise other than other legislative areas. But definitely Congress would be covered.

Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois. Is it also the gentlewoman's understanding that such a bill would come before the Congress before the end of this legislation session rather than in decades to come?

Ms. OAKAR. Well, based on my conversations and my own commitment as a member of the committee and my conversation with the senior majority members of the committee, I know there is a commitment to bring this issue to the floor of the House for a vote this session.

Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois. So the gentlewoman is saying that both the chairman of the committee, Hon. Gus Hawkins, who has done a great deal in areas of civil rights, is both aware of this and other senior members and the Congress of the United States will have a chance before the end of this session to remove, not a scarlet letter, but an "H" for hypocrisy from its forehead?

Ms. OAKAR. I do not know if I would talk about hypocrisy at this point, but I would say that that is my understanding that the gentleman who is the chair of the committee, as the gentlewoman knows, I have spoken to the gentleman and he is fully supportive of exactly what the gentlewoman has said.

Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois. I thank the gentlewoman.

Mr. Chairman, I will take very little more time.

I will tell my colleagues that other Members from both sides feel that this is just one more sham. I would prefer that we had had an amendment on this bill to show not just the good will, but intent.

But, frankly, we probably could have lost such a vote. It is very hard to pillory someone on a vote on a rule. It is very difficult to understand.

So with an equal mixture of hope and heart, I will withdraw what was going to be my request for a negative vote on the rule from Members who truly supported the idea that if we are so good at making laws for everyone, and if, indeed, sexual discrimination is a problem, that the leadership should be coming from here and, indeed, should have had the first, not the last, look.

I look forward to voting on such a bill before the end of the session.

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 7 minutes to the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. Oakar].

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I want to compliment the Rules Committee on its expeditious consideration of the legislation and the rule that has been fashioned to bring the bill to the floor.

I believe the rule is eminently fair, will allow for a full and considered debate of the provisions of H.R. 5680.

I also want to say that the name of the bill is the Federal Pay Equity and Management Improvement Act of 1984. This was introduced by myself as the lead sponsor and my original cosponsors, Congresswoman Schroeder and Congressman Steny Hoyer, both of whom have done fine work in the drafting of the entire bill.

Briefly, this legislation would, one, require that the Office of Personnel Management, OPM, conduct a study of the Federal Government's job grading systems to determine compliance with pay equity principles and eliminate discriminatory pay setting practices within the Federal civil service.

I want to stress that one of the reasons that we were not able to include other legislative branches like Members of Congress is because our committee does not have jurisdiction over that. We have jurisdiction over the administrative branch which is the largest number of Federal civil servants.

Mr. Speaker, I would urge those Members who want to include Members of Congress to get on board Olympia Snowe's bill. A lot of Members talk about how they feel, but they are not cosponsors of the bill.

The other thing that Members can do is sign on, right now, today, on the House fair employment practices agreement, which is not a substitute, but at least it shows the thrust.

But the second thing the bill would do is establish a performance management and recognition system for GS-13 to 15, Federal supervisors and managers to replace the current merit pay program.

And, three, make several improvements in the senior executive service.

Title I of H.R. 5680 does mandate the Office of OPM, in consultation with congressional committees and a pay equity study council, consisting of representatives of Federal employees' unions and women's organizations, to conduct a study of the Federal job-grading systems to determine whether they are marred by discriminatory wage-setting practices and wage differentials.

The OPM's final report to Congress and the President must include its finding and recommendations for eliminating discriminatory pay practices as well as the views of the council representatives.

This is a key factor in our legislation. The OPM is also prohibited from reducing pay for any position as a result of the study. We are not into lowering anybody's salary. We want to take a look comprehensively at how there salaries were determined.

Mr. Speaker, it is time for the largest employer in the Nation, the Federal Government, to examine its own job grading structure for sex-based wage discrimination. The current system for determining classification is tied to a standard developed in 1923 that has never been looked at since 1923 to determine whether it is affected by sex discrimination.

Nineteen States have already enacted comparable worth laws or have initiated studies of their pay and classification systems to determine their compliance with pay equity principles.

It is time for the Federal Government to begin to fulfill its responsibilities on these very important issues which are vital to the interests of every working woman and man in this country.

Twenty years have elapsed since the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Equal Pay Act were enacted. And yet, women still lag behind men in compensation.

In 1950 the wage differential between men and women workers was approximately 38 percent. Today despite the passage of more than three decades, women still average 40-percent less in earnings than men. We do not want to lessen men's salaries. That is not the bill and we prohibit doing that.

Forty percent of the 2.8 million Federal workers are women. The majority of whom are clustered in low-paying occupations, grades 1 through 7, paying an average annual salary of $17,000. And yet, the male workers are concentrated in the midlevel and upper grades and they earn an average salary of $28,000.

Is it not interesting to note that only 12 percent of those positions are occupied by women.

On its face, the data seems to suggest that women are paid less than men because the Federal classification and pay systems are biased against women. The study set forth in title I is necessary to either confirm or dispel that suggestion. We might be wrong. But without a study we will never know. There will always be the feeling that there exists discrimination.

The Congress, the administration, most importantly the Federal work force will have to continue making assumptions, unfounded or real, without the necessary supporting data.

Title II of the bill address the myriad of problems with the current merit pay system for midlevel Federal managers and supervisors, which was established by the Civil Service Reform Act of 1978.

In a recent report conducted by, at my request, the GAO, it found substantial employee dissatisfaction with the merit pay system. Virtually every phase of the current program was criticized.

□ 1300

The GAO found that approximately 80 percent of all employees studied believed that the merit pay system did not increase their motivation. This is why we need reform. That is in the bill also. We try to reform the merit pay program. And there is another title, title III, that places Congress on record in favor of the continuation of the senior executive service.

Now, Mr. Speaker, let me just say this: A vote for this rule is a vote for an open rule that deals with problems that the Committee on House Post Office and Civil Service has jurisdiction over.

I urge my colleagues not to be afraid of a study that relates to Government employees. It is time we did that in the spirit of fairness.

And so I ask my colleagues to be openminded about this rule. Vote "yes" on this open rule.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to address some questions to the gentlewoman from Ohio, following up on the colloquy she just had with the gentleman from Illinois.

Is it true that the study required by House Resolution 239 would only apply to one legislative branch agency which is subject to section 717 of the 1964 Civil Rights Act?

As I read it, the resolution says: The Commission shall choose an agency for this study, which I assume you are talking about, when we say really taking a look at the legislative branch, we could be talking about the Library of Congress, not really what we traditionally think of as the legislative branch. Is that accurate? Or has that been changed?

Ms. OAKAR. Of course, the original sponsor is not here. I wish she were. But the thrust of the bill, and my testimony relative to the bill, House Concurrent Resolution 239, is to include those legislative branches, including Members of Congress, relative to pay equity. I support that concept. I believe very strongly that that is what Congresswoman SNOWE means about her legislation. I know that members of that committee have a commitment to having that hearing and dealing specifically with that issue.

Mr. LOTT. I thank the gentlewoman for that, but I do want to express my concern that that may not be the way this resolution reads, because it sounds like you are saying "an agency," which could be GAO or the Library of Congress, and not necessarily involve the House of Representatives itself. So I hope you will take a look at that particular point, and I will discuss it with the gentlewoman from Maine also.

Ms. OAKAR. If the gentleman will yield on that point, Congresswoman MARTIN asked me specifically, beyond the resolution, whether or not I had a commitment to assure that Members of Congress be included, and she specifically asked that question, and I said yes.

Mr. LOTT. You do intend for it to be applicable then to House and Senate committe staffs?

Ms. OAKAR. I am on the committee, and I think the gentlewoman from Illinois knows that nobody has raised that issue more than I have and, of course, she has, when she was a member of that committee, so I think that is absolutely right.

Mr. LOTT. Does the gentlewoman feel that she has an ironclad commitment from the chairman of House Administration that this resolution will be reported for consideration of the House this session?

Ms. OAKAR. I believe that the chairman of the committee, who I talked to this morning, gave me that commitment that he would make that effort. He also would like to take a look, and I am sure you agree with this, at the manner in which the minorities are treated, as well, and I think it is time we do that, as well.

Mr. LOTT. Certainly, I do Does the gentlewoman have any idea what the cost of this commission might be?

Ms. OAKAR. This is Congresswoman SNOWE's bill, so I do not feel that I am qualified to give an answer on that.

Mr. LOTT. As I understand it, it would cost, according to CBO, $2 million. The reason why I am pressing this is because the gentlewoman from Illinois agreed not to press her objection to the rule, which did not allow her amendment to be in order, and I think we need to be sure we understand what is in this resolution and whether or not it is really going to come up or whether this could just possibly be shunted aside in the natural rush that we will have at the end of the year.

The point I am really driving at is, why do we go through this process?

Ms. OAKAR. If the gentleman will yield, I think it would be helpful if the gentleman were a cosponsor of the bill for the gentlewoman from Maine [Ms. SNOWE], and I think the gentleman could make sure that all of the things he wanted are there. I do not mean to embarrass the gentleman, but I do think—I agree with everything the gentleman has said, by the way, and I wanted to get order so that the Members could hear what the gentleman had to say, because I agree with it. But I think we need more cosponsors on Congresswoman SNOWE's bill. We have 81. They are bipartisan cosponsors. The gentleman's leadership would really be helpful on this bill.

Mr. LOTT. Well, I think I just may very well do that, because I sincerely believe that if we are going to pass this legislation and other similar legislation, it should apply to us.

Ms. OAKAR. I agree.

Mr. LOTT. I think we might have a little different attitude or we might realize what some of this means to people, and I think, frankly, it would be fairer if we did it that way. But I do not understand why we do not just go ahead and make it applicable to this bill instead of going through the study process, which would cost $2 million and could be applicable only to an agency of Congress and not Congress itself.

Ms. OAKAR. If the gentleman will yield on that point, as the gentleman knows, when we are talking about civil service, which is the committee that I have jurisdiction over as a member of the Post Office Committee—we do not have jurisdiction over the manner in which Members of Congress treat their staffs or how the committees treat their staffs, et cetera. House Administration does. But as the gentleman knows, what we are dealing with when we are talking about civil service is a classification system. Members of Congress do not have that classification system. It is like really and truly comparing apples and oranges. That is why in my judgment Congresswoman Snowe's bill deserves a full hearing in a markup to include exactly what you want to include, but it really is not under the jurisdiction of our committee, and the classification is in one setting and not in another. We have a very formal structure under civil service that has been in place since 1923. There is no structure when you are talking about committees and Members of Congress.

Mr. LOTT. With that comment, that is my objection. Nothing is applicable to us. We do not have the traditional structured system.

Ms. OAKAR. That is why I think the gentleman ought to get onboard Congresswoman Snowe's bill and let us get it passed out of House Administration.

But let us not diminish, if I could just say this to my friend, who I often agree with on many subjects, let us not diminish because of our discussion of Members of Congress the need to study the bulk of Federal employees and how they are treated under civil service. This issue hasn't been studied since 1923. I do not think we can avoid that issue. We are trying to do both, but there are two committees that have jurisdiction. I for one pressed for a hearing on Congresswoman Snowe's bill, which is this coming Wednesday, and I think the gentleman's leadership is needed, and I hope he will come to testify so that we can get a speedy markup of that bill.

Mr. LOTT. Well, I will just make one final point: This is a House resolution to set up a commission, and in and of itself will not be able to do a thing. Sooner or later we are going to have to address this issue in the law.

Ms. OAKAR. I agree.

Mr. LOTT. And for years now, whether it is environmental law or occupational safety, or whatever else, we say, "Oh, not us." I just think that our credibility with the people out there in the country who are living under our laws continues to deteriorate because we say, "Oh, hey, wait a minute, we cannot live with that," yet they have to live with so many things. A resolution is fine. But some day we have got to make it apply to ourselves.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Hoyer].

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to first congratulate the chairman of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee, the gentlewoman from Ohio and the gentlewoman from Colorado, for their hard work on this legislation and their determination to bring this legislation to the floor and into conference for timely enactment of the very important provisions within this legislation.

Let me also congratulate the Rules Committee for the very fair rule granted on this bill. While some of the amendments to be offered are opposed by the leadership of the committee and will be opposed by me, the rule nonetheless offers the House the opportunity to discuss in full the many aspects of this legislation.

H.R. 5680 contains three major areas of Federal personnel changes. Title I contains the extremely important and timely study of pay equity in the Federal Government. Title II contains changes in the existing merit pay system and establishes a new Performance Management and Recognition System. And title III contains various changes in the senior executive service.

This bill is the product of strong bipartisan input and, by and large, bipartisan consensus. I would be remiss, therefore, if I did not mention the very hard work and tenacity of my friend from Virginia, Frank Wolf, who spent a substantial amount of time and effort in order to reach the point where we are today.

I am especially proud, Mr. Speaker, that title II of the bill dealing with pay-for-performance, represents many of the changes in the merit pay structure that I have been recommending for the past 3 years.

The Performance Management and Recognition System establishes a new, governmentwide five-tiered system of performance appraisal where an individual's performance on the job determines his or her level of compensation. Unsatisfactory performers will be penalized for their less-than-expected performance while those individuals who perform outstanding work on the job will be rewarded with bonuses. The existing merit pay system was supposed to operate in just this manner. However, due to inadequate funding and a host of other problems, outstanding performers are actually making less than the people they supervise and less than they would make under the GS system. This bill remedies existing inequities while preserving the concept that the Federal Government ought to experiment with an effective and workable system that enhances the regular pay-for-performance aspects of the GS system.

The rule provides that Members who have a different approach to pay equity, to merit pay, or to the Senior Executive Service, will have an opportunity to discuss their approach during consideration of the bill. While I feel that by and large this bill is an excellent bill that does not need amending, the Rules Committee has offered the House the opportunity to work its will with this legislation.

Again, I commend the gentleman from Michigan and the gentleladies from Ohio and Colorado for their fine work and I look forward to consideration of H.R. 5680.

☐ 1310

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. Schroeder].

Mrs. SCHROEDER. I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank Congressman Hoyer, and Congresswoman Oakar, and so many other people who have worked so hard to bring it here. I think we just have to reiterate one more time, that this is a totally open rule; anything that is germane can be added here. How terribly important it is to proceed and move forward.

I, too, wanted to add an amendment that was not germane, and I, too, got told no. I was trying to deal with the subsidies in the DOD dining room and other little numbers like that; the Proxmire amendment, but it was not allowed. So I do not think that the Rules Committee was picking on one side of the aisle; they were saying that look, we are giving you an open rule, and we are giving you an open rule in the area that is germane, now come on, this is it. So they are right, and that is what we should be doing around here.

I also want to point out that many people are standing up talking about the fact that we are not under the same laws that everybody else is. Well, there is a group of about 100 of us who are, and we did it voluntarily. We have a group called the House Fair Employment Practices Committee, and it would be interesting to note how many people have really signed up for that. But many of us said we will agree to be bound by title VII and the titles that deal with equal pay, and subject it to a subjective group and look at that.

A group of us have really tried, when we have been thwarted by legislation and not been able to move it. I think all these things are important. Yes, yes, yes; we need to do whatever we can for equality anywhere. But you do not try and defeat what you are doing for equality for the largest number of Federal employees by saying it is not quite big enough; we missed another group. We will get that group too. It is not anything extraordinary that the Rules Committee did here at all; it is just within the jurisdiction of the House. A totally open rule on a bill that comes out of Post Office and Civil Service over the jurisdiction that we have.

I thank everybody for their patience and their time, and I thank the gentleman from California again for yielding, and I hope the rule goes right through.

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, before calling for the vote, I want to respond very briefly to the gentleman from Mississippi, and I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The Rules Committee received two requests to waive clause 7, rule XVI, germaneness, against amendments to H.R. 5680. Congresswoman SCHROEDER of Colorado asked that we waive germaneness in order to allow her to offer an amendment to prohibit taxpayer subsidies for executive dining rooms in Federal agencies or for congressional restaurants. Congresswoman MARTIN of Illinois asked that we waive germaneness in order to allow her to offer an amendment to expand the scope of the Pay Equity Study Council's mandate to include an investigation of sex discrimination in congressional, as well as Federal agency, hiring and pay practices.

The Rules Committee declined to waive the rule on germaneness for either amendment. The Rules Committee is always cautious about waiving germaneness; but, when the chairman of the reporting committee opposes such waivers and committee jurisdictions are at stake, the committee is extremely reluctant to make nongermane amendments in order. In this case, both the committee chairman, Mr. FORD, and the subcommittee chairwoman, Ms. OAKAR, specifically testified before the Rules Committee in opposition to any waiver of germaneness.

In addition, granting the waivers would have intruded on the jurisdiction of committees other than the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

Mrs. SCHROEDER's amendment restricting subsidies for Federal agency and congressional restaurants deals with subject matter within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Government Operations and the Committee on House Administration.

Mrs. MARTIN's amendment to study sex discrimination in congressional hiring and pay practices deals with subject matter within the jurisdiction of the Committee on House Administration.

The Rules Committee believes that only extraordinary circumstances justify shortcutting the normal committee process. We feel that no such extraordinary circumstances exist in this instance. We believe we were correct in not waiving the rules that were designed to protect procedures of the House.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. CARNEY. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present, and I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 276, nays 58, not voting 99, as follows:

Mr. DANIEL B. CRANE changed his vote from "yea" to "nay."

Messrs. TAUKE, RINALDO, EVANS of Iowa, and ZSCHAU changed their votes from "nay" to "yea."

So the resolution was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERMISSION FOR SUBCOMMITTEE ON INVESTIGATIONS AND OVERSIGHT OF COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC WORKS AND TRANSPORTATION TO SIT ON TUESDAY, JUNE 26, 1984 DURING THE 5-MINUTE RULE

Mr. LEVITAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Tuesday next, June 26, 1984, the Subcommittee on Investigations and Oversight of the Committee on Public Works and Transportation be permitted to sit while the House is sitting for amendments under the 5-minute rule.

I have discussed this matter with the ranking minority member of the subcommittee, and he is in full accord with this unanimous consent request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HOYER). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

Mr. LOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do not wish to object, but for the purpose of receiving information, do I understand the gentleman is talking about the Oversight Subcommittee of the Committee on Public Works and Transportation? Is that correct?

Mr. LEVITAS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LOTT. I am glad to yield to the gentleman form Georgia.

Mr. LEVITAS. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman is correct. It is the Investigations and Oversight Subcommittee. I have discussed the matter with the ranking Republican, the gentleman from New York [Mr. MOLINARI]. We have been doing a lot of oversight over the air control system and have been warning of safety problems beginning to emerge. Now we have received some new information which confirms our concerns, and that prompted us to schedule this hearing. It is an important meeting dealing with the problems we are increasingly finding creating potentially dangerous situations in the air traffic control system especially in light of recent disclosures, and that is the reason we are having such an early hearing on the subject. I have discussed this matter with the gentleman from New York within the last 2 hours, and he concurs in this request.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES ON S. 663, HIGHLY ERODIBLE LAND CONSERVATION ACT OF 1983

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Senate bill (S. 663) to make persons who produce agricultural commodities on highly erodible land ineligible for certain agricultural-related programs, and for other purposes, with the House amendment thereto, and agree to a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas? The Chair hears none and, without objection, appoints the following conferees: Messrs. DE LA GARZA, JONES of Tennessee, WEAVER, BEDELL, ENGLISH, GLICKMAN, DASCHLE, STENHOLM, TALLON, DURBIN, EVANS of Illinois, MADIGAN, COLEMAN of Missouri, JEFFORDS, SKEEN, MORRISON of Washington, and GUNDERSON.

There was no objection.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

(Mr. MICHEL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I have asked for permission to proceed for 1 minute for the purpose of inquiring of the distinguished majority leader as to the program for next week, since I assume we are finished for this week.

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, will the minority leader yield?

Mr. MICHEL. I am happy to yield to the majority leader.

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, we are finished with the legislative program for today and for this week, and when we adjourn today, we will adjourn to meet at noon on Monday, at which time we will have nine motions to suspend the rules on the following pieces of legislation:

H.R. 5313, Pipeline Safety Act authorizations;

S. 2375, Secondary Market Improvements Act;

H.R. 5655, Panama Canal Act amendments re interest payment;

H.R. 5584, management of Presidential records;

H.R. 5183, to convey certain National Forest System lands;

H.R. 1250, voting accessibility for the elderly and handicapped;

H. Con. Res. 321, early projections of election results;

H.R. 5686, American folklife bill; and

H.R. 4694, VA physicians military retirement pay waiver bill.

If votes are required on those motions, those votes will be postponed until Tuesday.

Following discussion of those bills, we will have general debate only on H.R. 5490, clarifying the application of title IX of the Civil Rights Act, and on H.R. 5680, the Federal Pay Equity Act.

On Tuesday, we have one suspension scheduled, H.R. 3979, the Comprehensive Smoking Education Act. Then we will take recorded votes on this and any other suspensions from the previous day that may have been requested.

Following that, we will go the H.R. 3282, the Water Quality Renewal Act, and H.R. 5798, Treasury-Postal appropriations, and complete consideration on those two bills.

After that we want to take up H.R. 5898, military construction appropriations; H.R. 5899, District of Columbia appropriations, and H.R. 5813, Transportation appropriations, and complete consideration of H.R. 3678, water resources authorizations; H.R. 5490, the title IX of the Civil Rights Act clarification; H.R. 5660 the Federal Pay Equity Act; and H.R. 4784, Trade Remedies Reform Act.

If it is possible to complete all these, we will have fulfilled a very productive schedule for these first 6 months of the year. I am sure the gentleman would realize, of course, that there are some conference committee reports that will have to be taken up during that time. We expect to get a conference committee report on the budget resolution, on the reconciliation bill, and on the tax bill, which have been rolled into one.

Mr. MICHEL. And the debt ceiling will also have to come up?

Mr. WRIGHT. Yes; and the debt ceiling.

Mr. MICHEL. So it is quite obvious that we are going to be here Friday, is it not?

Mr. WRIGHT. I think that is abundantly clear. I do not know how we can do otherwise.

• Mr. MICHEL. Well, there were some Members who inquired, knowing that when we break away for an extended recess as we are going to, well, there is the Thursday night getaway night, but I think Members ought to be well advised that with all this on the platter, they had better plan on being here Friday.

Mr. WRIGHT. That is indeed a wise admonition.

Mr. MICHEL. One other item, if I might, that is the case having to do with our colleague, the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. HANSEN] and the Ethics Committee. Is there any possibility of that coming before the House next week?

Mr. WRIGHT. Well, the chairman has not asked for a hearing, nor discussed with the leadership any timing of that motion. Of course, it is a privileged motion.

Mr. MICHEL. Yes.

Mr. WRIGHT. I would assume that the chairman of the committee would come and discuss it with those of us in the leadership on our side. If that happens, we surely will advise and discuss it with the gentleman from Illinois and any others whom the gentleman wants us to talk to.

Mr. MICHEL. Well, I would appreciate that. Of course, the gentleman involved would surely want to be apprised sufficiently in advance.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MICHEL. I am happy to yield to my colleague.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman yielding.

I notice on the program, if I might address this to the majority leader, the Transportation appropriations bill. That bill was reported some time ago and a rule was obtained on it waiving certain points of order. I understand it went back perhaps this morning to the committee and a new bill or revised bill has been reported.

Does the gentleman know if they are going to get another rule on that waiving those points of order or what the situation is in regard to it?

Mr. WRIGHT. If the gentleman from Illinois would yield.

Mr. MICHEL. I am happy to yield.

Mr. WRIGHT. It is my understanding that the Rules Committee expects on Tuesday to take up consideration of a revised rule. Obviously, the rule that earlier was reported, having been found deficient, it would be necessary for the Rules Committee to present some kind of a rule or else the bill would just come before us under the regular open rule procedure.

Mr. SNYDER. Well, if the gentleman will yield further, that is what I was trying to determine, if they were going to try to get a rule, if it was going to come up under the open rule procedure. It is the gentleman's understanding there will be another rule?

Mr. WRIGHT. It is my understanding that they will consider a new rule on Tuesday.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman, and I yield back the balance of my time.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY, JUNE 25, 1984

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet at noon on Monday next.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

REQUEST TO DISPENSE WITH CALENDAR WEDNESDAY BUSINESS ON WEDNESDAY NEXT

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the business in order under the Calendar Wednesday rule on Wednesday next.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. LOWERY of California. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. RUSSO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks, and to include therein extraneous material, on the subject of the special order today of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONTGOMERY].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

AMENDED REQUEST ALLOWING CONFEREES TO HAVE UNTIL MIDNIGHT SATURDAY, JUNE 23, 1984, TO FILE CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 4170, DEFICIT REDUCTION AND TAX REFORM ACT OF 1984

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, earlier this afternoon we had gotten permission to file a conference report by noon tomorrow on H.R. 4170, the Deficit Reduction and Tax Reform Act of 1984.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise that request to midnight tomorrow.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. MICHEL. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, and I do not intend to; but does the gentleman want to volunteer a little information on how he is proceeding over there? Can we reasonably expect that there is going to be an agreement?

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Well, I am looking at this very optimistically, I must say to the minority leader. We are about seven items away from having a successful conclusion to the conference report.

I must admit that when you are seven items away, having included 1,000 items, the items that are remaining are quite controversial and have Members' commitments, so the possibility of even having the conference report ready to file by noon is there, but I just wanted the option to go to midnight.

Mr. MICHEL. Well, I hope the gentleman has success. I know he has a very important personal engagement to attend to maybe a week hence or so.

Having talked to the gentleman from California [Mr. PANETTA] about the budget resolution, reconciliation, and the tax bill, it could be a very momentous week next week. If we could consider them next week hoping the progress the gentleman has thus had would continue through the balance of the day.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield further, I would like to add that I am going to try to hit for noon, because I would like to have the Government Printing Office print the document, so the option to go to midnight is just that, an option.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his comments, and I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI]?

There was no objection.

THE GI BILL: AN INVESTMENT WITH WINDFALL PROFITS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONTGOMERY] is recognized for 10 minutes.

● Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, we witnessed in this Chamber yesterday, during a series of speeches on the GI bill, the enthusiasm and overwhelming support for this program and its concepts.

The GI bill is a product of need, the need to provide our armed services personnel with the opportunity to readjust to civilian life, the need to keep our military at maximum strength, and the need to attract and hold on to personnel of high quality.

The GI bill is a product of concern, the concern of a nation in making certain its defenders are afforded the chance to improve their lives and the concern for national security.

The GI bill is a product of extraordinary foresight and strategic planning by the Members of the 78th Congress. Future generations in retrospect, will say that the House of Representatives in the 98th Congress displayed the same ability for wise planning when it passed the new GI bill on June 1, 1984.

The GI bill is a program of small investment and tremendous profits.

On this, the 40th anniversary of the signing of the GI bill of rights, I would like to share with my colleagues a letter from 1 of the over 18 million veterans who have benefited from this far-reaching legislation. No words could more succinctly state its impact on our society and the necessity to sustain that impact. The letter follows:

WASHINGTON, DC,
June 20, 1984.

Hon. G.V. MONTGOMERY,
U.S. Congress, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN MONTGOMERY: I am writing in support of the position you have taken regarding a new GI bill. The educational benefits program you advocate would return many times its costs, both to the individuals who have volunteered to defend our country and to American society as a whole.

Upon graduation from college in 1976, I enlisted in the United States Army. As you know, 1976 was the last year for the most recent nonparticipatory grants program.

This program was abolished in 1977, and I knew then that a voluntary program, particularly for enlisted members, was doomed.

Any GI bill returns its greatest benefits to the youngest, least-schooled servicemember. Apart from the paycheck sacrifice demanded of lower-ranked troops, the prime reason why this latest of noble experiments had to fail is that these individuals, at age 17 or 18, simply had no appreciation for the value of advanced education or training. Their usual response: "The Army's teaching me a skill, and I don't need any more education even if I don't reenlist." Unfortunately for these people, there is not much call for Hawk missile repairmen in civilian life, and the realization of this comes too late.

I was honorably discharged from the Army in 1979, having achieved the rank of Staff Sergeant. I then enrolled in law school, received my J.D., and entered private practice. the GI bill enabled me to make it through school on my own (supplemented, of course, by $16,000 in student loans). Without the $407 per month I received from the Veterans Administration, I would not have been able to start school when I did, nor could I have attended full time. I most certainly would not yet be a member of the bar, and would not be returning to the government, via taxes, the large chunk it now calls for.

I am proud of the service I rendered my country, and I do not feel that my country owes me anything for what I have done. Nevertheless, I also feel that I am returning more to my country now because of the shortterm, limited benefits I received under the GI bill. Some of this nation's greatest and most productive citizens, particularly those who served in the 1940s and 1950s, owe their education and training to the GI bill. These people have given far more to our society than Congress gave them. The investment certainly has returned windfall profits.

I urge you to continue your efforts in supporting new legislation. We shouldn't throw our veteran "babies" out with the deficit reduction "bathwater".

Best regards,

Sincerely,

William E. Hawkhurst.●

● Mr. FLORIO. Mr. Speaker, the Serviceman's Readjustment Act of 1944 was signed by President Franklin D. Roosevelt on June 22, 1944. That stroke of the pen marked the culmination of years of hard work and effort by far-seeing men and women who, if they could see today the realization of their labor, would be astounded by the scope of the success of their work.

In the 40 years which have passed since President Roosevelt signed the GI bill over 18 million American veterans have received education and training under the auspices of the GI bill. Soldiers in both times of war and in peace could be assured that a grateful Nation would provide the tools of learning and knowledge which would allow the veteran to prosper in the Nation which he had sacrificed so much to defend. Mr. Speaker, I am one of those 18 million veterans and I remain as grateful and proud of the efforts of those far-seeing visionaries of the past as I was years ago.

Mr. Speaker, we have the opportunity to uphold the dreams of those who have benefited from the GI bill throughout the past 40 years. The House of Representatives has overwhelmingly passed a new and even more comprehensive GI bill and it will be our task to ensure its success. Mr. Speaker, there is no one man among the membership of this House who has done more for veterans than the esteemed chairman of the House Veterans' Affairs Committee, Sonny Montgomery. His leadership and vision rank among those leaders of a generation ago who perceived the need for a Serviceman's Readjustment Act.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to submit for the Record an article which appeared in yesterday's Washington Post which was authored by my friend and colleague, Mr. Montgomery. I can think of no more eloquent and effective statement concerning the plight and potential of today's GI bill than the reasons set forth by the distinguished chairman.

Mr. Speaker, the article follows:

A New GI Bill: "Essential"

(By G.V. Montgomery)

If anyone should know firsthand the consequences of eliminating the proper education incentives for military recruitment, it is Robert B. Pirie Jr. ["How Much for the New GI Bill?" op-ed, June 18]. During the time he served as assistant secretary of defense for manpower, reserve affairs and logistics, from 1979 to 1981, the military suffered one of its worst recruiting periods ever, resulting in a serious shortage of middle-level commissioned and noncommissioned personnel.

Pirie says that in 1976, when Congress discontinued the GI Bill, the armed forces "experienced some rocky times . . . in meeting recruiting goals." This is a major understatement. It was a turbulent time. We simply cannot allow our manpower ranks, which are filled through volunteer service, to fall short again. The GI Bill is a proven safeguard against such shortages.

In addressing his concerns about a new GI Bill, Pirie failed to mention that those most affected by such a program, the men and women in service, are solidly behind its implementation. Indicative of this support is a letter I recently received from a young serviceman in which he commented specifically on the proven ineffectiveness of alternative education programs and the need for a supplemental program to allow him to support his family and finish college.

In reference to the Veterans Educational Assistance Program (VEAP), a contributory program now in effect, he said: "On a PFC's salary/income, it's impossible to simultaneously support a family and adequately invest in this current educational program. VEAP . . . is unfair to the lower enlisted military family."

VEAP requires a participant to contribute $25 to $100 in order to receive a 2-to-1 match from the federal government. The Senate-passed bill, which Pirie proclaims will create "fewer problems," requires that $250 be deducted from active duty pay for education benefits. How many active duty personnel can afford to give up $250 monthly? Are Pirie and the Senate really listening to our service personnel?

The Senate-approved program is not a GI Bill. It is just another limited test, an unattractive cousin of a failing federal program. There is no retention provision included in the Senate bill. However, the proposed new GI Bill contains a supplemental benefit tier and transferability provision that will assist the military in its efforts to hold on to quality personnel. In addition, service members may use their benefits while on active duty or may take advantage of a "leave of absence" provision. Furthermore, the Senate bill does not address the needs of the National Guard and Reserve, while the new GI Bill offers both a basic entitlement.

Pirie's statement that "later GI benefits tended to pay for correspondence courses of various kinds" is absolutely incorrect. As of May 1984, almost 6 million Vietnam-era veterans had trained under the latest GI Bill, 64.2 percent of whom were trained at institutions of higher learning. It is obvious that the civilian defense personnel who have consistently opposed the new GI Bill do not understand its benefits, nor do they cite correct statistics to back their arguments.

This new GI Bill, which was passed overwhelmingly by the House, is cost-effective. According to estimated budget outlays, its cost would be less in the year 2001, $761 million, than the military will be spending on bonus incentives in 1988, $805 million.

In response to the claim that military recruitment has improved dramatically, I say, "for how long?" The economy is improving and the unemployment rate is going down. Add to that a decreasing manpower pool and there is most certainly a recruitment problem.

By the early 1990s, the military will need to recruit one out of every two non-college males in order to maintain the necessary force level. According to a recent Army study, if the aggregate unemployment rate should fall to 7 percent in 1984, Army enlistments of male non-prior-service high school graduates would be falling by more than 14,000 a year. Obviously a drop in unemployment will reduce sharply the total supply of high school graduate enlistees.

While we do have many outstanding military personnel, overall quality can be improved. In 1982, according to a study by the General Accounting Office, 50 percent of our Army recruits were category III, which is a reading level of 7th to 10th grade. Only 19.4 percent of our Army enlisted personnel were categories I and II, which covers a 10th grade or above reading level. In the first quarter of 1982, 76 percent of our Army recruits were high school graduates, but 54 percent of these recruits scored below the 9th-grade level in reading and mathematics on screening tests. A high school diploma does not necessarily mean the basic skills are there.

I submit that we can not only afford a new GI Bill, we can actually cut costs by eliminating many ineffective recruiting devices now being practiced. The Senate-approved bill is an extension of those devices, offering nothing to our armed services, which is exactly what the return would be.

The new GI Bill is absolutely essential if we are to maintain quality in our armed services in the quantity needed for a strong and sound national defense.●

FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS EQUITY ACT OF 1984

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr. St Germain] is recognized for 5 minutes.

● Mr. ST GERMAIN. Mr. Speaker, I am introducing today, with my colleague CHALMERS WYLIE, a revised version of the Financial Institutions Equity Act of 1984, H.R. 5916. Since the introduction of the earlier version, H.R. 5734, on May 24, 1984, the Banking Committee has held hearings and heard testimony from the regulators, trade associations, consumer groups, and entities affected by the legislation. Based on this testimony and on discussions with my colleagues on the Banking Committee, I have prepared a bill, with the assistance of Mr. WYLIE, that I believe answers many of the questions and concerns that were raised about the earlier version. The Banking Committee will meet to mark up H.R. 5916 next Tuesday, June 26, at 10 a.m. So that Members may better understand this legislation, I am including a section-by-section analysis of the bill:

SECTION BY SECTION ANALYSIS OF THE FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS EQUITY ACT OF 1984, H.R. 5916

SECTION 2. BANK HOLDING COMPANY ACT AMENDMENTS

This section closes the "nonbank bank" loophole in the Bank Holding Company Act (BHCA) by redefining the term "bank" as used in that Act. Under present law, "bank" is narrowly defined, so that companies may avoid the restrictions of the BHCA by limiting the activities of their subsidiary depository institutions. Thus, for example, nonbanking firms have organized "consumer banks" which do not make commercial loans, and thereby are not considered banks under the BHCA.

This loophole is closed by redefining a "bank" as any institution which is FDIC insured, eligible to apply for FDIC insurance, or that accepts transaction accounts (such as NOW accounts or checking accounts) and also is engaged in the business of making commercial loans.

Excepted from the definition of a "bank", and thus from the restrictions of the BHCA, are federally chartered or insured thrift institutions, State chartered savings banks (including those insured by the FDIC), credit unions, limited purpose trust companies, certain foreign banks, and financial institutions primarily engaged in foreign operations. The exemption for trust companies requires that the company not engage in the cross marketing of products or services with the parent holding company or affiliates thereof.

A bank holding company may not provide insurance services (other than those permitted under the Garn-St Germain Act) through a subsidiary or affiliated company.

Nonbank banks, which become banks due to the enactment of this Act, are not required to become FDIC insured if they are insured under a State insurance system (including State sponsored private insurance programs) on the date of enactment and continuously thereafter.

Any company which is not in compliance with the BHCA due to the enactment of this Act, is given a two year period to come into compliance. Such companies wishing to retain their bank subsidiaries, must apply to the Federal Reserve Board for approval, and the Board is to treat the applicant as if it was applying to become a bank holding company. However, this requirement does not apply to "grandfathered" nonbank banks.

"Grandfathered" nonbank banks are banking institutions for which an application to charter the institution, or an application to acquire the institution (whichever was later) was accepted for filing by the appropriate State or Federal regulatory agency on or before January 1, 1983, and which are only engaging in activities which the institution engaged in on May 24, 1984.

SECTION 3. AFFILIATIONS AND OFFICER, DIRECTOR, AND EMPLOYEE RELATIONSHIPS BETWEEN NONMEMBER BANKS AND ORGANIZATIONS ENGAGED IN CERTAIN SECURITIES ACTIVITIES

Under current law, the Glass-Steagall Act restricts affiliations between Federal Reserve System member banks and firms engaged principally in certain securities activities. Interlocking directorates and other employee relationships between member institutions and such securities firms are also restricted. This section extends these restrictions to nonmember insured and noninsured banks, which are given two years to comply.

Excepted from the restrictions of this section are certain foreign banks and limited purpose trust companies. However, trust companies may not cross market services or products with affiliated companies if it is part of a holding company.

SECTION 4. EXTENSION OF SECTION 21 OF THE GLASS-STEAGALL ACT TO AFFILIATES

Section 21 of the Glass-Steagall Act presently restricts the securities activities of deposit taking institutions. However, it does not apply to affiliates of these institutions. This bill broadens the scope of section 21 so that it applies both to direct activities of deposit taking institutions and to their affiliates. Further, it specifically applies to affiliates of "depository institutions" as defined in the Federal Reserve Act, thus including all types of thrift institutions. Institutions are given a two year period to comply with these restrictions.

Excluded from the operation of this section are certain foreign banks and limited purpose trust companies. However, trust companies may not cross market services or products with affiliated companies if it is part of a holding company.

SECTION 5. DISCOUNT BROKERAGE

This section provides that if a depository institution provides discount brokerage services, it may not also provide investment advice which is available to customers of the brokerage service or which relate to securities which may be traded through the brokerage service.

Depository institutions that provide brokerage services, must do so either through a contractual arrangement with a separate company, or through a separately incorporated brokerage subsidiary. In either case, employees providing brokerage services must be paid on a noncommission basis, and certain other consumer safeguards must be complied with.

SECTION 6. SAVINGS AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS

The Savings and Loan Holding Company Act (SLHCA) defines two types of holding companies—"unitary," which control only one thrift institution, and "multiple," which control two or more institutions. Restrictions are placed on the permissible activities of multiple holding companies only.

This section extends the coverage of the SLHCA to companies which control uninsured thrift institutions, including State chartered savings banks (whether or not insured by the FDIC), and institutions insured under State law.

Unitary holding companies are required to conform their activities to those permitted multiple holding companies, unless the thrift institution meets the test for a "qualified institution."

A "qualified institution" is a thrift which has at least 65 percent of its assets in residential mortgages and related assets for three out of every four calendar quarters. Related assets include securities backed by residential mortgages, cash and obligations of the United States or a State, the business premises directly used by the institution, stock of any Federal Home Loan Bank, as well as other enumerated assets. Thrift institutions would be given a two year period to meet the qualified institution test, except for savings banks, which would be given up to 15 years depending upon its asset composition at the date of enactment. In any case, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation may grant temporary exceptions to the 65 percent investment requirement due to extraordinary circumstances.

This section specifies that an institution which becomes covered by the SLHCA due to the enactment of this Act, and which is insured under State law (or through a private insurance organization established under State law) does not have to obtain Federal insurance so long as the State insurance remains continuously in effect.

Nonqualified institutions may not engage in commercial lending activities, and Federally insured nonqualified institutions may not engage in any activity not permissible for a federally chartered thrift association.

The provisions of the Glass-Steagall Act relating to affiliations between member banks and firms engaged in certain securities activities, and relating to interlocking directorates and other employee relationships between member banks and firms engaged in certain securities activities, are extended to apply to federally insured and uninsured thrift institutions, including State chartered savings banks.

Finally, the prohibitions on tying of services which are applicable to federally chartered thrift institutions are also made applicable to state chartered thrift institutions, including savings banks. In addition, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation is given the authority to regulate the cross marketing of products and services between a unitary thrift holding company and its controlled thrift institution.

SECTION 7. RESTRICTIONS ON STATE CHARTERED DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS

State chartered banks and thrifts may only engage in activities outside the scope of section 4(c)(8) of the Bank Holding Company Act (for banks), or section 408 of the National Housing Act (for thrifts), if these activities are conducted in-State for State residents. With respect to existing relationships which do not comply with these restrictions, a 10 year compliance period is provided. For example, existing checking accounts with out-of-State residents or existing loan participations across State borders may continue, but no new noncomplying relationships may be created. State chartered thrifts are allowed to do what federally chartered thrifts can do under the Garn-St Germain Act.

SECTION 8. IMMEDIATE DIVESTITURE

Entities that begin activities prohibited by this Act between May 24, 1984 and the date of enactment must cease these activities as of the date of enactment.

SECTION 9. EXEMPTION OF CERTAIN INSTITUTIONS

Existing State chartered, State insured thrifts (including those insured by a private corporation established under State law), and State chartered FDIC insured savings banks, are exempted for compliance with this Act so long as the institution undergoes no change in control, in corporate status, or in the method of insurance of accounts.●

"(4) The schedule required by paragraph (2)(B) shall establish for each category and subcategory of nonpoint sources of pollution specified under paragraph (2)(C) an expeditious time period for implementation of best management practices and measures specified under paragraph (2)(D) and shall indicate the estimated dates for implementation of such practices and measures.

The Administrator may approve a portion of a plan under this subsection. If the Administrator does not disapprove a report, plan, or portion of a plan in such 180-day period, such report, plan, or portion shall be deemed approved for purposes of this section.

"(2) If, after notice and opportunity for public comment and consultation with appropriate Federal and State agencies and other interested persons, the Administrator determines that a plan submitted under subsection (b) or any portion thereof is not likely to satisfy, in whole or in part, the goals and requirements of this Act, that adequate authority does not exist, or adequate resources are not available, to implement such plan or portion, that the schedule for implementing such plan or portion is not sufficiently expeditious, or that the practices and measures proposed in such plan or portion are not adequate to improve the quality of navigable waters in the State and to reduce the level of pollution in navigable waters in the State resulting from nonpoint sources, the Administrator shall disapprove the plan or portion thereof with respect to which the Administrator makes such determination. The Administrator shall notify the State of such disapproval and request specific revisions of such plan or portion necessary to obtain approval of such plan or portion. Not later than 90 days after the date of such notification, the State shall submit to the Administrator for his approval under this subsection its revisions of such plan or portion.

After development of such plan, such agency or organization shall submit such plan to the Administrator for his approval. If the Administrator approves such plan, such agency or organization shall be eligible to receive financial assistance under subsection (i) for implementation of such plan as if such agency or organization were a State for which a report submitted under subsection (a) and a plan submitted under subsection (b) were approved under this section. Such financial assistance shall be subject to the same terms and conditions as assistance provided to a State under subsection (i).

"(g) Upon request of a State, the Administrator may provide technical assistance to such State in developing a plan under subsection (b) for those portions of the navigable waters requested by such State.

If, on the basis of information available to him, the Administrator determines that a State is not meeting applicable water quality standards or the goals and requirements of this Act as a result, in whole or part, of pollution from nonpoint sources in another State, the Administrator shall notify such States. The Administrator may convene a management conference under this paragraph not later than 180 days after giving such notification, whether or not the State which is not meeting such standards requests such conference. "(7) For each fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1986, the Administrator may give priority in making grants under this subsection, and shall give consideration in determining the Federal share of any such grant, to any State which has included effective regulatory mechanisms in an approved State plan under this section and has implemented such mechanisms in the preceding fiscal year. Such mechanisms shall include, but are not limited to, deadlines for implementation of best management practices and enforcement procedures to ensure implementation of such plan.

MAINTENANCE OF WATER QUALITY IN ESTUARIES

SEC. 45. (a)(1) In any case where the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency (hereinafter in this section referred to as the "Administrator") determines, on his own initiative or upon request of one or more States any portion of which is located within the estuarine zone of an estuary, that the attainment or maintenance of that water quality in such estuary which assures protection of public water supplies and the protection and propagation of a balanced, indigenous population of shellfish, fish, and wildlife, and allows recreational activities, in and on the water, requires the control of point and nonpoint sources of pollution in more than one State, the Administrator shall convene a management conference. The members of such conference shall include the Administrator, the Administrator of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, a representative of each of those States which are located, in whole or in part, within the estuarine zone of the estuary for which the conference is convened, a representative of each interested Federal agency as determined appropriate by the Administrator, a representative of any interstate agency having jurisdiction over all or a significant part of the estuary, and representatives of local governments within the estuarine zone as deemed appropriate by the Administrator. In any case in which an interstate agency has jurisdiction over all or a significant part of the estuary, such agency shall be the lead agency for purposes of carrying out this section. The Administrator shall give priority consideration under this section to Long Island Sound; Buzzards Bay, Massachusetts; Delaware Bay, Delaware and New Jersey; and Albemarle Sound, North Carolina.

(1) to develop a comprehensive master plan for such estuary;

(2) to coordinate the implementation of the master plan by the States participating in the conferences;

(3) to recommend priority corrective actions and compliance schedules to address point and nonpoint sources of pollution posing the most serious problems; and

(4) to monitor the estuary to determine the effectiveness of actions taken pursuant to the master plan.

(c) The master plan developed pursuant to paragraph (1) of subsection (b) may include, but need not be limited to any of the following standards and practices which are necessary for the attainment or maintenance of that water quality which assures protection of public water supplies and the protection and propagation of a balanced, indigenous population of shellfish, fish, and wildlife, and allows recreational activities, in and on the water:

(1) development of water quality standards for waters within the estuarine zone;

(2) development of toxicity-based standards for toxic pollutants;

(3) development of water quality based effluent standards for significant point sources of pollution; and

(4) development of best management practices to control nonpoint sources of pollution.

For purposes of this section, the term "State" has the meaning such term has in section 502(3) of such Act.

(f) The Administrator is authorized to make grants to States and interstate agencies participating in a management conference which has adopted a comprehensive master plan pursuant to this section for the estuary which is the subject of such conference. The amount of the grants to any State or interstate agency for a fiscal year shall, subject to such amounts as are provided in appropriation Acts, be equal to 50 per centum of that State's or agency's cost of implementing the master plan for such fiscal year. There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subsection not to exceed $10,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1984; not to exceed $30,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985; not to exceed $50,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986; not to exceed $75,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1987; and not to exceed $75,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1988. "(2) REPATRIATION OF INCOME.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), any amount directly or indirectly transferred or credited from a branch account established pursuant to subsection (c) to one or more other accounts of such company shall, unless such transfer or credit is a reimbursement to which paragraph (1) applies, be added to the income of the domestic life insurance company.

"(B) LIMITATION.—The addition provided by subparagraph (A) for the taxable year with respect to any contiguous country life insurance branch shall not exceed the amount by which—

"(i) the aggregate decrease in the tentative LICTI of the domestic life insurance company for the taxable year and for all prior taxable years resulting solely from the application of subsection (a) of this section with respect to such branch, exceeds

Any amount so added shall be treated as a dividend paid by a foreign corporation, and the taxes paid to any foreign country or possession of the United States with respect to such amount shall be deemed to have been paid by such branch.

"(2) UNITED STATES SOURCE INCOME ALLOCABLE TO CONTIGUOUS COUNTRY BRANCH.—For purposes of sections 881, 882, and 1442, each contiguous country life insurance branch shall be treated as a foreign corporation. "(h) SPECIAL RULE FOR DOMESTIC STOCK LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES.—At the election of a domestic stock life insurance company which has a contiguous country life insurance branch described in subsection (b) (without regard to the mutual requirement in subsection (b)(3)), the assets of such branch may be transferred to a foreign corporation organized under the laws of the contiguous country without the application of section 367 or 1491. Subsection (a) shall apply to the stock of such foreign corporation as if such domestic company were a mutual company and as if the stock were an item described in subsection (c). Subsection (e)(2) shall apply to amounts transferred or credited to such domestic company as if such domestic company and such foreign corporation constituted one domestic mutual life insurance company. The insurance contracts which may be transferred pursuant to this subsection shall include only those which are similar to the types of insurance contracts issued by a mutual life insurance company. Notwithstanding the first sentence of this subsection, if the aggregate fair market value of the invested assets and tangible property which are separately accounted for by the domestic life insurance company in the branch account exceeds the aggregate adjusted basis of such assets for purposes of determining gain, the domestic life insurance company shall be deemed to have sold all such assets on the first day of the taxable year for which the election under this subsection applies and the net gain shall be recognized to the domestic life insurance company on the deemed sale, but not in excess of the proportion of such net gain which equals the proportion which the aggregate fair market value of such assets which are transferred pursuant to this subsection is of the aggregate fair market value of all such assets.

The deduction allowable for items described in paragraphs (1) and (6) of section 805(a) with respect to variable contracts shall be reduced to the extent that the amount of such items is increased for the taxable year by appreciation (or increased to the extent that the amount of such items is decreased for the taxable year by depreciation) not reflected in adjustments under the preceding sentence.

"(b) Adjustment to Basis of Assets Held in Segregated Asset Account.—In the case of variable contracts, the basis of each asset in a segregated asset account shall (in addition to all other adjustments to basis) be—

For purposes of the preceding sentence, beneficial interests in a regulated investment company or in a trust shall not be treated as 1 investment if all of the beneficial interests in such company or trust are held by 1 or more segregated asset accounts of 1 or more insurance companies.

"(2) Safe harbor for diversification.—A segregated asset account shall be treated as meeting the requirements of paragraph (1) for any quarter of a taxable year if as of the close of such quarter—
